PREFACE.

Ms. No. W. 7 Feb. '05.

THE Editor hopes he has rendered an acceptable service to the religious public, by bringing forth from almost entire oblivion, this small but admirable treatise. The strenuous efforts of Authors and Publishers to attract attention to new works, and the necessarily greater interest we feel in the present than in the past, combine to throw the books of former years into increasing obscurity. Though books abound in every department of knowledge or piety, yet those of a proper kind do not abound, at least, on practical religion. Sabbath Schools and Tract Societies, together with extended education, have created a taste for reading, which it has become extremely difficult to supply. We are deplorably deficient in books for private Christians and common readers, which possess interest without fiction—religion without sectarianism—plainness of style without vulgarity—and importance of matter without being above general comprehension. These excellencies, the Editor thinks are eminently displayed in this little volume.

Most works of this kind, since Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, have been clumsy imitations of that immortal production, and have fallen into merited contempt. KEACH is entitled to the merit of originality, not less than that of skill. His line of metaphor is wholly diverse from that of Bunyan. While that delineates the progress of a soul in sanctification, this depicts religion itself as a pilgrim, and describes the treatment it receives from the various orders of men. In point of theological accuracy, devout temper, and useful tendency, the Travels of True Godliness may bear comparison with Pilgrim's Progress. The admirers of Bunyan cannot fail to be pleased with Keach.

Considerable liberties have necessarily been taken with the style, as the work was written an hundred and fifty years ago; but the sentiments have in no instance been varied in the least. The Memoir has been prepared with much attention, expressly for this edition of the work.

Those who adopt as one of their modes of benevolence, the distribution of awakening tracts, will find this happily suited to their purpose, and adapted to a great variety of characters. To Christians it will prove an excellent closet companion, containing judicious and satisfactory helps to self-examination, and designating the true and false marks of grace, with remarkable precision. May the divine blessing attend it.

TO THE READER.

IN this tract are shown the many snares and temptations that attend both riches and poverty, youth and old age ; together with the chief reasons why most people, of all ranks and qualities, are such great strangers and enemies to true godliness. The legalist and formal hypocrite may here see what dangers they are in : also you have an account of many errors and heresies, with a detection of Antinomian errors. True Godliness is described in his own primitive internal and external beauty and glory, being vindicated from all calumnies and reproaches cast upon him in this and former ages ; with his sad lamentation, in respect of the prevailing power of vice, ungodliness, papistry, and other enemies at home and abroad. Also the usefulness of consideration, and of the utmost improvement of the means, in order to union with Christ and true conversion, is clearly exhibited, together with the causes and fatal consequences of apostasy.

If thou art a believer, read with delight. But if thou art an enemy to True Godliness, read and tremble : for the great happiness of the one, and the miserable condition of the other, is here laid before thy eyes.

In this treatise, you may see the little cause the godly have to mourn in the worst of times, or the ungodly to rejoice in the best of times. I hope none will be offended because True Godliness is here presented in an allegory, since the Holy Scriptures abound with them, and so fully justify our essay herein. But since it hath been abroad near twenty years, and hath found kind acceptance amongst people of all persuasions, I need not say any thing farther as to that; yet knowing that the times are quite changed, to what they were when first it was published, I have corrected this edition, and made great additions.

And as I have received an account from many, what good God hath done by it to their souls, so if any receive profit by this, I shall rejoice; and to that end shall commit it and thee, to the blessing of Jehovah, in whom I still remain, through infinite grace,

Thy soul's friend and servant,

BENJAMIN KEACH.

REV. BENJAMIN KEACH.

BENJAMIN KEACH was born at Stokeham, in Buckinghamshire, England, Feb. 29, 1640. He had the inestimable blessing of pious parents, but though in respectable circumstances, they were unable to give him a liberal education, which, at that day, was so much more expensive and difficult than at present. He was, therefore, placed at a trade. Soon, however, it was perceived by his uncommon love of books, and critical manner of reading the Scriptures, that the employment was uncongenial. He, notwithstanding, continued at his business about three years, during which time, he was led by observing the entire silence of the sacred oracles on the subject of infant baptism, to enter on a deliberate examination of that subject, which resulted in his joining a Baptist church in that county.

The church discovering his piety and talents, about three years afterwards, in 1658, called him to the solemn work of the ministry. He was now in his 18th year, and for about two years he pursued his work with great comfort and success, and much to the edification of those who heard him. The Baptists in the part where he lived, generally held the sentiments of the Remonstrants, or Arminians, and from these he imbibed and maintained it; till on coming to London, where he had an opportunity of consulting both men and books, he found that the different opinions upon these subjects had given rise to two denominations of Baptists. Examining this point more closely, he in a few years came to a clear understanding of the Calvinistic sentiments, and continued to maintain them during life.

In the year 1664, he wrote a little book, which many of his friends wished him to publish for the use of their children. This request he complied with, and entitled it, The Child's Instructor, or a New and Easy Primer. He did not put his name to it, and procured a friend to write a recommendatory preface; from which it seems that he apprehended it would expose him to some difficulties, as there were several things in it contrary to the doctrines and ceremonies of the church of England.

This book was no sooner printed, and some few of them sent down to him, than one Mr.

Stratford, a justice of the peace for that county, was informed of it. He immediately took a constable with him, and went to the house of Mr. Keach, where they seized all the books they could find, and bound him to appear at the assizes, to answer for his crime, in a recognizance of a hundred pounds himself, and two sureties of fifty pounds each.

The assizes commenced at Aylesbury, October the 8th, 1664, and Lord Chief Justice Hyde, afterwards Lord Clarendon, presided. The account of this trial shows the shameful prostitution of justice resorted to in order to punish the nonconformists, in those days of persecution.

The treatment of Mr. Keach during this trial, was harsh and unreasonable, and the sentence severe. It is as follows :

“Benjamin Keach, you are here convicted for writing, printing, and publishing a seditious and schismatical book, for which the court’s judgment is this, and the court doth award, That you shall go to gaol for a fortnight without bail or mainprize ; and the next Saturday to stand upon the pillory at Aylesbury in the open market, from eleven o’clock till one, with a paper on your head with this inscription: For writing, printing, and publishing a schismatical book, entitled The Child’s Instructor, or a New and Easy Primer. And the next Thursday, to stand, in the same manner and for the same time, in the market at Winslow; and then your book shall be openly burnt before your face, by the common hangman, in disgrace of you and your doctrine. And you shall forfeit to the king's majesty the sum of twenty pounds, and shall remain in gaol until you find sureties for your good behaviour, and for your appearance at the next assizes; then to renounce your doctrines, and make such public submission as shall be enjoined you. Take him away, keeper!"

All the attempts of his friends to obtain any abatement of this sentence were ineffectual. It was executed both at Aylesbury and Winslow, with even more exactness and rigor than was customarily used toward common malefactors.

Though Mr. Keach seems not to have been daunted by persecution, yet considering how much it obstructed his usefulness in Buckinghamshire, and how much greater opportunities of doing good would be afforded him in the metropolis, he removed to London in 1668.

He had not been long in London, before he was invited to settle with a congregation in the Borough, and was solemnly ordained by imposition of hands in 1668, being then 28 years of age.

During four years after the settlement of Mr. Keach, they were obliged to meet from house to house, and though very careful to prevent being discovered, they were twice disturbed, and some of them indicted to appear at the Quarter Sessions.

In 1672, when the declaration of indulgence was published, they built a meeting-house at the corner of Stoney Lane, Horselydown. It pleased God to give such success to the ministry of Mr. Keach, that they soon increased so considerably, that the place was frequently enlarged till it became capable of containing nearly a thousand people.

From this period to the revolution in 1688, Mr. Keach took a lively interest in every thing which related to the Protestant interest, wrote several of his best works, and embraced every opportunity to expose the iniquitous scenes that were transacted for the introduction of Popery.

Mr. Keach appears to have taken an active part in the general assemblies held in London in 1689, &c. He was requested by the Association, to visit the baptized churches, in several parts of the kingdom, and to preach the gospel to them. In this journey, he was accompanied by Mr. Benjamin Dennis, and was attended with great success. His zeal for the Baptist denomination appeared by writing in defence of it; by encouraging ministers who came to him from all parts of the kingdom; and by procuring the erection of several meeting-houses for the worship of God.

In 1692, Mr. Keach engaged in a controversy on the subject of baptism, with the Rev. Mr. Burkit, rector of Milden in Suffolk, and the well known author of the exposition of the New Testament.

He was led into this controversy by being solicited by the Rev. J. Tredwell, pastor of the Baptist congregation at Lavingham, to reply to an attack on him and his people, by Mr. Burkit, whose parish adjoined Lavingham. Mr. B's piece was entitled "An argumentative and practical Discourse on Infant Baptism," and was evidently written in great heat and indignation. The administration of immersion is caricatured so as to make it appear both ludicrous and disgusting. Tredwell and his brethren are called Anabaptists—the persons baptized are affirmed to have come up from the water covered with filth, and compared to creatures rising out of the bottomless pit. Mr. Keach's answer was entitled "The Rector Rectified."

Mr. Keach was induced to reply to various other publications on the subject of baptism, which frequently extorted rejoinders, in which he was not always treated with decorum. Rus-sen in his "True Picture of the Anabaptists," published 1703, not only asserted in broad and general terms, that this sect was the most vile and pernicious that had ever appeared on the face of the earth, holding dangerous errors, and being men of profligate lives, but singled out Mr. Keach by name, and affirmed him guilty of uncleanness. So far from resorting to a civil process to punish such an accuser, Mr. Keach seems to have taken no notice whatever of this slander. A number of his friends, however, among whom were two members of Parliament, waited on the author, who refused to name his informant, or to attempt to sustain his allegation. So convinced, however, was the publisher of the injustice and cruelty of the allegation, that he appended to the book a certificate signed by twenty-eight gentlemen, among whom were some of the principal citizens of London. In this certificate it is not only set forth that the signers are "entirely satisfied that Mr. David Russen's assertion in his book entitled, A true Picture, &c. that the said Mr. Keach had been accused of uncleanness, is false, groundless, and malicious," but the most honorable testimony is borne to his character as a christian and a minister. Thus did he shine with greater lustre, and his books acquire more extensive circulation.

Mr. Keach took a considerable part also in some controversies among the Baptists, on subjects in which they were not agreed. Such as laying on of hands on baptized believers. The propriety of granting ministers a maintenance for their labors. Singing the praises of God in public worship. And the abrogation of the Seventh-day Sabbath.

On the first of these subjects, viz. Laying on of hands, Mr. K. was very strenuous for its being an essential requisite to church membership, and practised it, therefore, on all he baptized. The Baptist churches, however, have never seemed to regard this dispute as of any importance, and his book produced no special effect. On the subject of granting ministers a full maintenance, that they may be free from all secular anxieties, he assumed the affirmative, and argued in the most conclusive manner. So satisfactory was his treatment of the subject, that in the Assembly, 1689, this work was particularly recommended by the whole body of ministers and messengers of 107 churches.

The practice of singing in public worship was at that time by no means general among Baptist churches. So odious had been the pompous and theatrical music of the Popish Church, that many dissenters in reforming from the errors of that community, dispensed wholly with singing.

Mr. K.'s treatise on this subject was published in 1691, entitled, "The Breach in God's Worship repaired," &c. In this controversy his success was very conspicuous: and about that time many of the churches in England commenced singing as a part of the public service of the sanctuary. He did not succeed, however, in reconciling all the members of his own church; and a portion of them withdrew, retaining the same principles as their brethren, but abolishing the use of psalmody, except at the close of the Lord's supper. This was the origin of the church in Maze Pond. After a few years it conformed to what was become the general practice, and introduced singing. We notice an ex-postulation made by Mr. Keach in his writings during this controversy, because it serves to show the inflexible integrity of the early Baptists, in adhering to what they thought Scripture duty, though at the greatest hazard. He says: "Hath not the church sung at breaking of bread always for sixteen or eighteen years last past, nor would omit it in the time of the late persecution?" No doubt but their singing the praises of God had often disclosed their place of meeting to their persecutors. And as their Lord went from the supper to the garden, and from thence to the cross, so they had often left the Lord's table to appear at the magistrate's bar, and from thence be dragged to the prison.

His work on the Jewish, and Christian Sabbath, was published in 1700, entitled, "The Jewish Sabbath abrogated: or the Saturday Sabbatarians confuted; in two parts.—First, Proving the abrogation of the old Seventh-day Sabbath—Secondly, That the Lord's day is of divine appointment. This was occasioned by some of his people embracing those sentiments. But the arguments he produced prevented their spread, so that but about three or four left him to unite with the Sabbatarians.

Archbishop Tillotson was pleased to extol this book, and pay Mr. Keach many marks of favor.

This acquaintance between them was probably owing to Mr. John Griswold, pastor of the Baptist church in Barbican, for whom this pious prelate had a great respect, and was often one of his hearers.

The respect paid by Archbishop Tillotson to the Baptists probably arose from the circumstance of his father, who was "remarkable for a good understanding, and an uncommon knowledge of the Scriptures," being a Baptist. This was Mr. Robert Tillotson, a considerable clothier at Sowerby, in the parish of Halifax, Yorkshire. He embraced the sentiments of the Baptists when his son was very young; and this gave rise to the report that the Archbishop had never been baptized in infancy, and led Dr. Birch to say in his sermon before the house of Commons, January 30, 1694, We have fathers of the church who never were her sons. To this the Archbishop alludes in a letter to Lady Russel, August 1, 1692. Speaking of King William, he says, "If it please God to preserve my good master, and to grant him good success, I have nothing more to wish in this world, but that God would grant children to this excellent prince; and that I, who am said not to have been baptized myself, may have the honor to baptize a Prince of Wales."*

* Birch's Life of Tillotson, p. 2, 3, 298.

Mr. Keach not only wrote much on practical subjects, as well as in defence of the truth,* but at times engaged in public disputations. One of these public discussions was with the

Some of the works of Mr. Keach display a good share of learning; but this was supplied by others. The preface to his Tropologia; or A Key to open Scripture metaphors, was written by the famous Thomas Delaune, and bears his signature, T. D. Nor did Mr. Keach wish to appear in borrowed plumes, since he acknowledges in the preface to the Rector Rectified, as follows: 'Whereas you will find both Hebrew, Greek, Latin, German, Dutch, made use of either more or less in the ensuing answer, I would not have you think I understand all these languages; but I have had the assistance of a learned person, (though in that case only) who is my friend and acquaintance, that so the work may be more fully and effectually done.' " fore you,' and quickly after left him. So remarkable was the answer of God to this good man's prayer, that I cannot omit it; though it may be discredited by some, there are yet living incontestible evidences of the fact. For Mr. Keach recovered of that illness, and lived just fifteen years afterwards: and then it pleased God to visit him with that short sickness which put an end to his life."*

During this illness he had many friends with him, but the violence of his distemper soon deprived them of the expectation of his life. When he was very near his end, Mr. Joseph Stennet was sent for; but when he came, Mr. Keach was not able to say much to him, excepting desiring him to preach his funeral sermon from 1 Tim. i. 12. I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day. During his illness, he manifested extraordinary patience and resignation to the divine will, and with much composure, told his wife that he had recommended her to a better husband—the Lord Jesus Christ: and exhorted his children to live in love, peace, and unity, and in a steadfast adherence to Christ and his ways. A little before his death, his eldest daughter, who was one of the people called Quakers, came to see him, with whom he endeavored to converse, and manifested a great eagerness and desire to speak with her, but his speech failing prevented him. He died July 18, 1704, about 11 o'clock in the morning, and in the 64th year of his age. On the following Friday, his remains were taken from his meeting house, at the corner of Stoney-lane, to the Baptists' burying ground in the Park Southwark. A very large auditory was collected to hear his funeral sermon; but the illness of Mr. Stennet prevented him from preaching it, till some time afterwards. The sermon was not printed, though he was strongly solicited to do it.

Mr. Keach had been twice married. His first wife was a Miss Jane Grove, of Winslow, in Buckinghamshire, "a woman of great piety and prudence," to which might have been added, great affection and fortitude, which she manifested when her husband was set in the pillory, by standing by him, and defending the cause for which he suffered. This good woman died October, 1670, in the 31st year of her age. This was a very great affliction to him, as she was a very tender and loving wife, and had been his companion in sufferings ten years. By her he had five children, three of whom, Mary, Elias, and Hannah, survived him. The extraordinary affection which he bore to her memory, was manifested by his writing a poem on the occasion of her death, which he entitled, A Pillar set up, assigning as his reason, the example of Jacob, And Rachel died and was buried, and Jacob set up a pillar on her grave ; that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day. In this he gave her a very high character, commending her zeal for the truth, sincerity in religion, uncommon love to the saints, and her great contentment in whatsoever condition of life God was pleased to place her. He particularly mentions how great an help and comfort she was to him in his suffering for the cause of Christ, visiting him while in prison, and taking all possible care of him, and encouraging him to go on, counting it an honor done them both, in that they were called to suffer for the sake of Christ. She was of a heavenly conversation ; her discourse was savory, and for the most part, about spiritual things, seeking the good of those she talked with ; and in this she was so successful, that many have acknowledged that they were indebted to her conversation for their conversion to God. As Mr. Keach published this account of her, that her example might be imitated by others, for the same reason we have thought it worth transcribing.

After being a widower about two years, he married Mrs. Susanna Partridge, of Rickmansworth, in Hertfordshire. This union was much to his comfort, as they lived together in great affection, thirty two years.

“To collect every particular transaction of this worthy minister’s life, cannot be expected, at such a distance of time: nay, even to collect all that was excellent and inimitable in him, is too great a task to be now undertaken. I shall only observe that he was a person of great integrity of soul; a Nathaniel indeed: his conversation not frothy and vain, but serious, without being morose or sullen. He began to be religious early, and continued faithful to the last. He discharged the duties of his pastoral office with unwearied diligence, by preaching in season and out of season, visiting those under his charge, encouraging the serious, defending the great truths of the gospel, and setting them in the clearest light. He was not addicted to utter hard censures of such as differed from him in lesser matters, but had a love for all saints, and constantly exercised himself in this, to keep a conscience void of offences towards God and towards man. He showed an unwearied endeavor to recover the decayed power of religion, for he lived what he preached; and it pleased God so to succeed his endeavors, that I doubt not but some yet living may call him their father, whom he hath begotten through the gospel. He affected no unusual tones, nor indecent gestures in his preaching—his style was strong and masculine. He generally used head notes, especially in the latter part of his life; and if his sermons had not the embellishments of language, which some boast of, they had this peculiar advantage, to be full of solid divinity; which is a much better character for pulpit discourses, than to say they are full of pompous eloquence, and flights of wit. It was none of the least of his excellent qualifications for the ministerial work, that he knew how to behave himself in the house of God, in regard of the exercise of that discipline which is so necessary to a Christian society.

“In his family, he was very exemplary, encouraging the first appearances of piety, and constantly instructing them in the things of God, and putting them in mind of the concerns of their souls, praying with and for them. He was a very affectionate husband, a tender father, a prudent master, and a constant and grateful friend.”*

Though he had suffered much from persecution, his temper never became sour, nor his religion tinctured with austerity. His industry, both in preaching and writing, was astonishing. He was not less prudent than peaceable; not less condescending than powerful; not less charitable than courteous. Grave, impartial, and faithful, he managed the affairs of his congregation with success, and departed himself so as to secure the respect of his most inveterate enemies.

The church with which he labored thirty-six years, and with which he died, has continued to this day: and though several churches have been formed out of it, remains strong and flourishing. His immediate successor was Mr. Benjamin Stinton, after whose death, the learned Dr. Gill was settled. During the pastorship of Dr. Gill, the church divided:—he and his brethren built the meeting house in Carter lane. The remainder built a meeting house at Unicorn yard, Horselydown, and chose Mr. William Arnold pastor. The present minister in Carter lane, is the Rev. John Rippon, D. D. who, at an advanced age, continues ably to discharge the laborious duties of his eminent station.

CHAPTER I.

What True Godliness is—His Origin and Antiquity.

TRUE Godliness being a great stranger to most men, and indeed known but by few, I shall, in the first place, before I treat of his travels, and of the entertainment he meets with, give you a description of him; because many persons are subject to so great an error, as to take Morality for him: some also take Counterfeit Godliness for him; and others, out of ignorance, (to say no worse,) rail, and ignominiously call him Singularity, Stubbornness, Pride, and Rebellion, as if he were not fit to live, he being considered a seditious disturber of kingdoms, cities, towns and villages, wherever he comes; yea, such a factious and quarrelsome companion, that he is indeed the cause of all those unhappy differences, divisions, troubles, and miseries, that are in the world. I conclude, therefore, nothing is more necessary, than to take off that mask which his implacable enemies have put upon him, and clear him of all unjust slanders, and reproaches of the sons of Belial; so that he may appear in his own original and spotless innocency, that none may be afraid of him, or be unwilling to entertain him, nor ashamed to own him, and make him their bosom companion.

Know, therefore, in the first place, that Godliness consists in the right knowledge of divine truths, or fundamental principles of the Gospel, which all men ought to know, and be established in, that would be saved. “Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness. God manifested in the flesh, justified in the spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, and received up to glory. 1 Tim. iii. 16. These great truths of the Christian religion, are called Godliness.

Now, should any demand farther to hear more particularly what those principles of divine truth, or fundamentals of the Christian faith be, which are the essentials of True Godliness, I answer,

1. That there is one eternal, infinite, most holy, most wise, just, good and gracious God, or glorious Deity, subsisting in three distinct persons—the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; and these are one—that is, one in essence.

2. That this God, out of his great love and goodness, hath given us one sure, and infallible rule of faith and practice, viz. the Holy Scriptures, by which we may know, not only that there is a God and Creator, but the manner of the creation of the world, and of all things, in six days; together with the design, or reason, wherefore he made all things; and also to show us how sin came into the world, and what righteousness it is which God's holy nature requires, to our justification, or discharge from the guilt of sin, &c. viz. by a Redeemer—his own Son, whom he sent into the world; and that there is no other rule or way to know these things, so as for men to be saved, but by revelation, or the sacred records of the holy Scriptures. And that the mystery of salvation lies above human reason, and cannot be known by the natural light in men.

3. That our Redeemer, the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the surety of the new covenant, and only Mediator between God and man, is truly God of the essence of the Father, and truly man of the substance of the virgin Mary, consisting of these two natures in one person; and that redemption, peace, and reconciliation, are by this Lord Jesus Christ alone.

4. That justification and pardon of sin is alone by that full satisfaction which Christ made to God's justice; and that is apprehended by faith alone, through the Holy Spirit.

5. That all men who are, or can be saved, must be renewed, regenerated, and sanctified by the Holy Spirit.

6. That there will be a resurrection of the bodies of all men at the last day.

7. That there will be an eternal judgment, that is, all shall be brought to the tribunal of Jesus Christ in the great day, and give an account for all things done in the body; and that there will be a future state of glory and eternal happiness of all true believers, and of eternal torment and misery of all unbelievers and ungodly persons, who live and die in their sins.

Now, I say, in the true knowledge and belief of these principles (which comprehend the fundamentals of true religion, or the Christian faith) does True Godliness consist, as to his essential part.

Secondly, Godliness, as to his inward parts, is a holy conformity to these sacred and divine principles, which natural men understand not. True Godliness consists in the light of supernatural truths and life of grace, God manifesting himself in the light of those glorious principles, and working the life of supernatural grace in the soul by the Holy Ghost. It consists in the saving and experimental knowledge of God and Jesus Christ; in having the evil qualities of the soul removed, and heavenly habits infused in their room; or in a gracious conformity, disposition, and affection of the heart to God, cleaving to all truths made known to us, finding the powerful influences of the gospel and spirit of Christ upon us, whereby our souls are brought into the image and likeness of his death and resurrection. This is True Godliness. Not a bare living up to the natural principles of morality, nor an historical, notional, or dogmatical knowledge of the sacred gospel, and its precepts, but in a faithful living up to the principles of the gospel, discharging our duties with as much readiness and faithfulness towards God as towards man, so that our conscience may be kept void of offence towards both. Acts xxiv. 16.

It consists in forsaking every sin, and loathing it as the greatest evil, and cleaving to God in sincerity of heart, valuing him above all; and, from a principle of divine love, being willingly subject to all his laws and appointments. Godliness makes a man say with the Psalmist, "Whom have I in heaven but thee?" &c. Psal. lxxiii. 25. St. Austin saith, "He loves not Christ at all, that loves him not above all." He that entertains True Godliness, is as zealous for the work of religion, as for the wages of religion. Some there be, who serve God, that they may serve themselves upon God. But a true Christian desires grace, not only that God would glorify him in heaven, but that he may glorify God on earth. He cries, "Lord, rather let me have a good heart, than a great estate." Though he loves many things beside God, yet he loves nothing above God. This man fears sin more than suffering, and therefore he will suffer rather than sin.

Thirdly, That you may have a complete and perfect knowledge of him, it may not be amiss if I describe his form, together with the very habilaments he continually wears.

The external parts of True Godliness are very beautiful; and no wonder that they are so, seeing he was fashioned by the wisdom of the only wise God our Saviour, the works of whose hands are all glorious. But this, viz. the formation of Godliness, being one of the highest, and most admirable contrivances of his eternal wisdom, must of necessity excel in glory and amiableness. His form and external beauty, therefore, are such, that he needs no human artifice to paint or adorn him, or to illustrate or set off his comeliness of countenance; for there is nothing defective as to his evangelical and apostolical form, as he came out of his great Creator's hands. And, as there is nothing from head to foot that is superfluous, so every line and lineament, vein, nerve, and sinew of him, are in such an exact and admirable order placed, that to his beauty there can be no addition. Every one, therefore, that adds too, or alters any thing, touching the form of True Godliness, mars and defiles instead of beautifying. Besides, God hath strictly forbidden any thing of this nature to be done. "Add thou not unto his word, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar," (Prov. xxx. 6.) by ascribing that to God which is none of his. Do not the Papists call those superstitious and vain ceremonies used in their church, by the name of God's worship? And what is this less than putting a lie upon him? Besides, it reflects upon the wisdom of God, to attempt to change or alter any thing in the form of Godliness, as if he did not know best how he himself would be worshipped; but must be indebted to man for his help, wisdom, and contrivances, touching many things that are called decent and necessary. And does it not reflect upon the care and faithfulness of God, to suppose that he should not himself take care to lay down in his blessed word things which are all necessary to the form of Godliness, without weak man's care and wisdom, to supply what he should omit?

All, therefore, may perceive, that True Godliness never changes his countenance: he is the very same, and not altered in the least from the aspect he bore in primitive times; nay, and there is indeed nothing more foreign to him than those pompous garbs, superstitious vestments, images, crossings, salt, oil, holy water, and other ceremonies, which are by many thought necessary to his existence. Therefore take heed you do not mistake the counterfeit form of Godliness for the true one. It is only necessary to note one thing more, viz. you must be sure to receive the power of Godliness with his form; for his form, without his inward life and power, will do you no good: it is but as the body without the soul, or the shell without the kernel, or the cabinet without the jewel. Neither ought any to slight his form, for you may remember what the Apostle speaks of "the form of doctrine," Rom. vi. 17, and of "the form of sound words," 2 Tim. i. 13. for as the true faith must be held fast, so must the profession of it also. You may, it is true, meet with a shell without the kernel; but it is rare to meet the kernel without the shell!

Having thus briefly given you the description both of the inside and outside power and form of True Godliness, we shall proceed to show you whose offspring he is. By his name, God-liness, or God-likeness, we may discover from whence he descends, and learn of what noble parentage he is. He is indeed high-born, the great and glorious offspring of the Lord Jehovah, the Almighty Prince of heaven and earth, the King of Kings, the Lord of Lords, the universal monarch of the world, whose kingdom ruleth over all. And as this is his noble extract, so likewise he is always in high favor with his prince; for there is not one in heaven or earth, whom he loves more, or in whom he takes more delight, than in True Godliness; nor is there any indeed more like him, or that more represents him in all the earth; for he bears his express and heavenly image; yea, and such a venerable respect and gracious esteem hath he of him, that those who love him, he loves; those who hate him, he hates; those who receive him, he receives, and those who reject him, he rejects; where he comes to dwell, there God, Christ, and the Holy Ghost dwell.

Godliness is of great antiquity: nay, according to the description we gave you of him, in the first place, we may well say, he is without beginning of days, for Truth, (sometimes he bears that name) dwelt in God from everlasting. But if we speak of his antiquity, in respect of his dwelling here below, the first man that knew him was Adam ; who, whilst he stood in the state of innocency, enjoyed his company, but by the malice of a great and potent enemy he was abused, and his image so defaced and marred, that he forsook his habitation, which was the ruin of our first parents, and their whole posterity ; and had not the King of heaven and earth, through his infinite wisdom, provided a way to recover man from his lost estate, Godliness had made his abode no longer in this world ; for by means of corruption of nature, there was brought forth a monster whose name was Vice, otherwise Lust, who found so much favor with Adam's children, that Godliness was utterly discountenanced. Though he was the offspring of Heaven, and the only delight of Jehovah, and unto man the greatest friend and benefactor, striving to enrich him, cheer his heart, and make him truly noble and renowned on earth, and bring him back into his primitive glory, and thereby at last make him eternally happy in heaven, yet he was so lamentably slighted, that but one of Adam's offspring cared for him at that time. And he, for entertaining him with that just and good respect he deserved, was by his brother, whose name was Cain, basely murdered. Godliness, by this, perceived very early with what kind of usage and entertainment amongst the children of men he was likely to meet. And truly never was there any one so nobly descended, and of such an excellent, peaceable a nature and behaviour, so dealt with as Godliness hath been, from the beginning to this day, except the Prince of Godliness himself. Yet he found some friends after Abel was slain, who entertained him kindly: and though they were reproached, hated, and persecuted for showing favor to him, yet they never lost by him, but were infinite gainers; nay, so great a friend was he to the next man who eminently embraced him, that he saved him from the grave; he sent him to heaven without calling at the gate of death. It is impossible to describe what sweet and heavenly communion, true joy and felicity, this good man had with Godliness, for the space of three hundred years; for so long they abode together on earth, and now dwell together with the Father of True Godliness, and his only begotten Son in heaven. Some time after this great Prince (for so they are all made who entertain True Godliness,) was carried to heaven, the dominion of Vice became so complete, and the guilt of men grew to such an awful magnitude that Jehovah was constrained to destroy them from off the earth, by a fearful and amazing flood of water. There was, at this time, but one man on earth, (viz. Noah,) who was an eminent lover of Godliness, though it is not to be doubted but his wife and sons, especially two of them, were likewise in some measure friends to him. Noah was commissioned to advocate the cause of virtue and the character of True Godliness by public preaching for one hundred and twenty years; but we are not informed of the least impression being made on any heart, so dominant was sin.

But to proceed in this brief account of the antiquity of Godliness, it will not be amiss if we speak of the next renowned man after Noah, who entertained him, and how he was blessed in so doing: his name at first was Abram, but afterwards Abraham. This man lived for sometime amongst a blind and idolatrous people, and was ignorant of True Godliness; but when he became acquainted with him, few men ever loved him better. He made him his bosom companion, and chief delight (and so indeed must every one that entertains him;) and hereby he became great, and his glory and renown were spread abroad. Indeed, because he cherished True Godliness, he was called the "friend of God," and the father of all true lovers of Godliness: and besides the outward blessings this faithful man reaped as the fruit or reward of Godliness, which were many, for he had much cattle, men-servants, sheep, camels and asses; he was blessed also with all spiritual blessings, viz. he had sweet fellowship and communion with God, and abounded in faith, love, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

I might proceed further, and show you who they were that entertained Godliness in the succeeding ages, for the space of more than two thousand years, what great blessings he brought them, and what they suffered for his sake; but I can give you a brief hint or two upon this account. Lot was saved by him from the fire of Sodom, for the angel could do nothing till Lot was gone forth. Joseph suffered for him by his envious brethren, but Godliness advanced him for his integrity at last. David, for the love he bare to him, was for many years together, greatly persecuted, but afterwards Godliness raised him to great honor, made him rich, and set a crown upon his head.

I might show how in ancient days, he was very much hated and persecuted : some of his true friends cast into a fiery furnace, and another into a lion's den ; yet they never lost any thing by him, nor did they ever repent the entertainment they gave him. If we come into the times of the Gospel, it is well known what usage he met with in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and his blessed Apostles. Afterwards, by the heathen Emperors, he was most cruelly hated and persecuted ; and those who entertained him were put to all manner of deaths and torments imaginable. Lastly, we might show you what hard usage he met with by Counterfeit Godliness, I mean papistry, for near twelve hundred years ; and how many of his dear children and servants have, for the sake of him, been burnt to death, and otherwise tormented, in most nations in Europe. But what has been said is sufficient in relation to the antiquity of True Godliness, and his various treatment in former days.

CHAPTER II.

The chief Enemies of Godliness.

HAVING given you a brief account of the antiquity of True Godliness, and some of those great abuses he met with in ancient times, it may not be amiss, before I come to treat of his Travels and entertainment in these latter days, to give a description of some of his chief adversaries, that true lovers of Godliness may be aware of them; and those who have a mind to be acquainted with him, and are hindered from receiving him into their houses,* may know the cause and reason of it.

1. One of the chief enemies of this great favorite of heaven, is the Devil; nor is there any one that hates him more.

2. Sin, or Vice, and as it is sometimes termed, Lust.

3. The Flesh.

4. The World.

But this general description is not sufficient to discover the great danger men are in, by certain emissaries and servants of those grand adversaries which many are ready to entertain as friends, not suspecting their fatal danger. I shall, therefore, give you an account of a few of them, and tell you their names. 1. Unbelief. 2. Pride. 3. Vain-Glory. 4. Formality. 5. Hypocrisy. 6. Opposition. 7. Heresy. 8. Superstition. 9. Idolatry. 10. Prosperity. 11. Persecution. 12. Ignorance. 13. Blind-Zeal. 14. Vain-Hope. 15. Sloth, or Idleness. 16. Covetousness. 17. Old-Custom. 18. Evil-Example. 19. Self-Righteousness. 20. Presumption. 21. Despair. 22. Slavish-Fear. 23. Sensual-Pleasure; and 24. Apostacy: with many others of like quality, too tedious here to reckon up; but by mentioning the names of these, you may easily discern who and what the others are, who with their attendants are all implacable enemies to True Godliness, and endeavor to hinder his being entertained where he comes, as you will find in the ensuing history of his Travels.*

* If he be not a guest with you at this time, reader, examine which of these evils keeps him out of your heart. Then pray mightily that your bondage to sin may be broken. This is your day of mercy. Ed.

CHAPTER III.

Godliness, having received a Commission to travel, and visit the Children of Men, comes to a certain Town on the Confines of Babylon, where Riches dwelt. His Usage and Treatment there.

THE great Jehovah, Father of True Grace or Godliness, out of his infinite goodness to mankind, was graciously pleased to send them a Saviour, even the Lord Jesus Christ, who is "able to save to the uttermost all that come to God by him." Heb. vii. 25. But in his eternal wisdom hath so ordained, that no man should have any saving benefit by this glorious Saviour, but he who doth receive, entertain, and embrace True Godliness. I now, therefore, resume my allegorical narrative, by considering Godliness as having received a commission from the King of heaven and earth, to travel and ascertain who would embrace and entertain him. His commission was very large: not limited to the land of Cannan, but embracing all nations, countries, and kingdoms. Matt. xxviii. 19, 20. Mark xvi. 15. And to visit the rich and the poor, the old and young; as well the king on the throne as the beggar on the dunghill; even all, bond and free, male and female. Nor was he sent to travel alone, but had a very rich and glorious retinue always with him; neither did he come to any man's house empty-handed, but brought with him most rich and glorious presents of the choicest things of heaven, the worth of which is infinitely beyond our computation.* I first saw him draw near a city in which Riches dwelt—a man to whom great deference was paid by the inhabitants, and into whose noble mansion I hoped he would be readily welcomed.

Godliness knocked, however, very hard and often, before any within would give an answer, Riches being full of business, either telling his money, or casting up his accounts, to see what his neighbors owed him, or consulting new projects to increase his store; for he is a person never satisfied. Besides, the times being very perilous, his mind was filled with perplexing and vexatious thoughts, how to save and keep what he had already gotten; so that he had no leisure to listen to the continual knocking of True Godliness at his door, he was therefore forced to wait a long time. But that which grieved this high-born prince most of all was this, viz. he perceived that no sooner did some other guests come to his door, who were much inferior, as to birth and quality, (and indeed not worthy of the least regard, not having business of that great weight and moment with him which he had) than he opened his door immediately to them; yet before this renowned personage could get in, Riches had so many base and ill bred servants in his house, that they shut the door, so that he could not get so much as one foot in. The guests he so readily opened to, were "the Lust of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life," 1 John ii. 16. These he took much delight in, and kept company with continually; sometimes they conducted him to the tavern, sometimes to the play-house, and sometimes amused him at bowls, cards, and dice, and divers other sensual sports and pleasures. But at last he was taken very sick, and Godliness still waited at his door. At this time one was in his house, who forced him to listen to this earnest and continual knocking. His name was Mr. Fearful. He is one that Riches doth not at all love, but when sickness comes he is grievously troubled with him; and he made him at this season cry out, Who is there? Who is at my door?

* This retinue is the train of Christian graces, and the presents are the precious comforts of religion in this life and the rich glories of a future heaven.

Godli. I am here, and have a long time waited at your door.

Riches. What is your name?

Godli. My name is True Godliness, one that you have little reason to slight, neglect, and condemn as you have done; for there is none you stand more in need of, nor can do you that good which I can and will do you, if you but open your door and receive me.

Riches. Sir, I am troubled that I have not regarded you all this while, for I have a great reverence and respect for Godliness; God forbid I should keep you out any longer!

Upon this the whole house was in an uproar, for he had (as I told you before) divers loose, ill-bred, or rather hell-bred servants, all bitter enemies to True Godliness; their names were, Presumption, Pride, Unbelief, Ignorance, Malice, Vain-hope, Covetousness, and several other base persons, whom he had brought up, and a long time cherished in his house. These seemed greatly concerned, that the least heed or attention should be given to True Godliness. They also inquired who was the cause of the proposal to admit Godliness. At last, understanding it was Mr. Fearful, they presently joined together to fall upon him, and expel him from the house. Presumption struck the first blow, and spoke to this purpose :

Presump. Are not you a base fellow, so to disturb my master, as to cause him to doubt of the sufficiency of his strong and impregnable fortification,* wherein he hath long and satisfactorily placed his confidence, and now to force him to incline to open to True Godliness, who is our utter enemy? Is not our master an honest man? What can you charge him with? What cause or ground is there for this disturbance? Hath he not done much good in the parish where he lives, and given many a piece of bread at his door? I engage it will go well with him. Fearful, what do you say?

* It is the snare and guilt of the rich to trust in riches. This it is, and not the mere possession of wealth, that makes it "hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."
Ed.

Fearful. Truly, Sir, seeing him very sick, I thought he might die in his sins.

Presump. Thou fool! what if he should, did not Jesus Christ die for sinners? God is merciful, and will forgive men their sins at any time, even at the last hour, if they do but call upon him. Besides, Fearful, are you mad, to give way, much more to force him to incline to open to True Godliness? for if once he is admitted to the house, you will be immediately turned out, and hardly, if ever, have the least countenance.

Fearful. Truly, Presumption, the fault was not principally mine; I was partly forced to do what I did.

Presump. Forced! by whom? who forced you?

Fearful. It was the steward of the house, who keeps the records, or an account of all that is done, whose name is Conscience. He, finding much guilt lying upon him through his cruelty, hard-heartedness, and debauched life, stirred me up to do what I have done: nay, Conscience told him he had been so vile and graceless, that if he died, he would go immediately to hell ; therefore you cannot censure me for disquieting him.

Pride. Hearken to me a little : Is it not below such a brave and heroic spirit as always attends Riches, to be troubled about sin, or to give way to a clamorous Conscience, and this illbred Fearful ? I hate the thoughts of it ; this is the way to bring him to reproach and shame amongst his neighbors, and to make men of distinction, who have been his companions, laugh at him, and contemn him. My great prince Lucifer sent me into his service, and I will not betray my trust, ever to consent that this unwelcome and hateful traveller, should be admitted, who would beguile my prince of his right.

Unbelief. Dear sirs, there is no danger. I agree with my friend and brother, Presumption, that his condition is good enough, let Conscience say what he will. If there be a hell, (though I much question it,) yet he will go, should he die, I will assure you, to heaven.

Ignor. What a tumult is here ! If our master were poor, there might be some ground for this base Fearful, to disquiet him. I can give as good counsel as any of you : “ Money answers all things ;” he may “ make him friends with the mammon of unrighteousness ;” let him give a little more than usual to the poor, and that will merit God’s favor. Who would not part with a little money, to get peace of conscience, and purchase a place in heaven? Charity is more than all your new notions of religion : Charity covers a multitude of sins. Though I know but little, yet I am not such an ignoramus as some think.

Vain-Hope. I am of the mind with my brother, Unbelief ; and it was I also, you know, who have kept up his spirits all along, and did what I could to stop steward Conscience from giving way to Mr. Fearful to open the door : let him therefore put his trust in me, and he will fear nothing.

Presump. Come, cease this noise ; all is well yet : Godliness is not let in, and our master is much better than he was ; and though Conscience inclines to embrace this our enemy, yet you will find he will not be regarded in a little while. Let us all agree, at present, to stir up Riches’ eldest son, whose name is Honor, the father’s favorite, and the hopes of all the family, to see what he can effect, in order to keep our enemy Godliness out. Now our friend Pride is the fittest to be employed in this work ; for he is much in favor with our master's eldest son.

After a short time it resulted thus: Riches being recovered, he consulted with Worldly-Honor, a great enemy to True Godliness, which was one reason why the Almighty said a great while ago, "How can you believe that receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" John v. 44. Now Pride, Ambition, and Honor, being all three the natural offspring of Riches, so much possessed his affection, that Godliness was kept out, (making good that word, "The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God—God is not in all his thoughts:") and Conscience being at this time almost stifled, Fearful was forced to fly and conceal himself till another season. But Godliness remained at his door for a long time—even till he waxed old ; and Conscience, having recovered a little strength by reason of his going now and then to hear a sermon, stirred up Mr. Fearful again to open the door, and had almost prevailed, had not a base servant of Riches, (who, I take it, was his Purse-bearer,) bestirred himself. His name was Covetous- ness,* an implacable enemy to True Godliness. He perceiving that Godliness was like to meet with some entertainment, spoke to Riches after this sort :

Covet. Sir, will you be so unwise now in your old age, as to open your door to this stranger? It will be to your great injury, I assure you : and besides, I, who have been a drudge to you all along, and the means by which you have gained most of your estate, shall, at the very instant you receive him into your house, be turned out ; nay, and not only so, but be also brought under a severe sentence, and be condemned to die for idolatry. And then your treasures will fly ; for you will find him a chargeable gentleman, teaching a doctrine that I am sure you hate ; and I cannot blame you, for it is very destructive to your interest.

Riches. What doctrine is that? Prithee, inform me, for I have a very great esteem for thee ; and in truth, for a long time have been sensible of the service thou hast done me ; for when I kept my old servant Prodigality for a purse keeper, I could never thrive; but since I met with thee, I have increased my substance exceedingly.

Covet. Why, sir, then I will tell you; he teaches Riches to be what he calls rich in good works, that is, generous in building up religion in the world, and to follow a new master, who had not one foot of land in all the world, nor a house to dwell in; no, nor one penny of money; whose disciples were generally poor, illiterate and contemptible people. Sir, in a word, if you open to Godliness, you will be undone; for though you are not put upon selling all you have presently, as some that would have received him in ancient days were required to do, yet you will be forced to give to the poor saints, as they call them, not merely a little, but according to what your estate and their necessity is. Nay, you will never know when you have done, for he will find out for you every day new objects of charity; he will tell you there are so many poor heathen without Bibles or teachers, and so many poor and desolate churches, so many poor widows, and so many neglected children in the city, and nobody knows what other objects of charity,

(as he calls them) for whom efforts must be made; and who should do it, he will say, but Riches? nay, it is a thousand to one, if he do not put you to build an hospital, or endow some professorship. Besides, when you have done this, he will not let you rest, but will tell you, whensoever Christ's members are sick, you must visit them; and when hungry, feed them; when naked, clothe them; and when in prison, you must relieve them. And then, if times of persecution for the sake of religion should come, he will send you to prison, to see if Christ be not there; I mean some of his poor children, who lie there for his sake. If there be any, though they may not in all points of religion agree with you, yet he will tell you, you must not let them want, whilst you have enough to supply their necessity; and if you do, he will tell you, "Go, ye cursed," &c. will be your portion at last. Besides all this, you do not think what an amount of money he will tell you it is your duty to give to Pastors and Ministers of the gospel, who are his great instruments and promoters in the world; nay, Sir, he positively affirms, you ought not only to give them just so much as will supply their necessities, but that it is your duty to give, and their right to have, a plentiful allowance, so that they may be freed from all the perplexing cares of this life; and may have as much out of your estate, as to be able to give to others also, that so they may be examples of charity; (and indeed I cannot deny but that the Scriptures do say they ought to be men given to hospitality, Tit. i. 8.) and many of them are poor, and therefore that they should do this, Godliness says is impossible, unless they are capacitated so to do by Riches. Moreover, this Godliness is so unhappy, and, in truth, hath always been, that he hath many great and potent enemies; so that they who receive and entertain him have been exposed to great troubles and frequent persecutions.

Riches. I must confess thou hast said enough to make me forever out of love with Godliness; I cannot bear the thoughts of entertaining such a guest as this in my house: but what shall I do with my clamorous steward Conscience? for he every now and then tells me I must listen to him, and stirs up that Fearful, a fellow that I certainly hate, but cannot get rid of, to terrify me with the thoughts of hell and damnation; telling me that “without holiness, (I must confess I have so read) no man shall see the Lord ;” and that “ whoever will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.”

Covet. Why truly, Sir, I see no remedy but you must resolve to keep him under. I perceive he is the chief cause of all the disturbance and trouble that is in your house. But for the way this shall be done, I must refer you to that worthy gentleman, and understanding servant of yours, Dr. Self-Love ; for in this case I am not qualified to give counsel, being not brought up in learning ; but he and Sir Worldly-Wisdom, being both able divines, will be sure to find out a ready way to do it, so that you shall not be troubled with him any more ; and this I will assure you, if I can be helpful to them in the business, I will be at your command.

Dr. Self-Love and Sir Worldly-Wisdom, being at hand, Riches called for them, to whom he addressed himself after this manner :

Riches. Gentlemen, you have both great learning and experience in the laws, divine and human. Be pleased to give me a little of your counsel. My case is this : there is one who calls himself True Godliness, at my door, and presses hard for entertainment ; but by means of a description I have lately had of his manners and attendants, I perceive it will be dangerous at this time for me to receive him, or to show him kindness. But I have a troublesome steward, whom I cannot get rid of, who too much favours him, and is ready often to open the door; so that by his means, and one Fearful, a timorous fellow, whom he stirs up, I have of late had but very little quiet. Now, what will you advise me to do in this sad condition?

Dr. Self-Love. You must not give way to Conscience. Sir, if you follow his dictates, and embrace this Godliness, you will be undone, and your wife and children will soon be brought to a piece of bread, notwithstanding your great estate. Sir, your great fault hath been this, (I perceive it clearly,) you have read too much of late; why should you concern yourself with the Bible? I think it had been well if it had never been translated into our mother tongue; this hath given him opportunity to disturb your mind. Come, give over this in the first place. The cause, you know, of a distemper must be first removed, or no radical cure can be effected; it is enough for you to mind your secular affairs; things of religion belong to religious men; and when Conscience for any sin distresses you, divert yourself amongst the brave heroes you used to keep company with; go to the tavern, or to some play-house; but at no time read any book besides your books of accompts, and romances. What this traveller saith, is but mysterious nonsense, enough to make men mad; I do not say, you should not be religious at all: no, God forbid I should give you such counsel; but let it be liberal religion. If we try to do as we would be done by, we shall fare well enough. There is no need to entertain strict Godliness, because you may be saved without it; else, what will become of the greatest part of the world! Go to church and hear prayers, but be sure never to go to any churches where methodistical preachers endeavour to reach your conscience. Can any man persuade me his soul cannot be saved, unless he “sell all he hath, and give it to the poor,” and so “become a fool, that he may be wise?”

Sir Worldly-Wisdom. Mr. Riches, the counsel which my brother hath given is very good: be sure you are never led, by the dictates of your fanatical steward, Conscience, to expose yourself to any loss or reproach for religion. You hear you may be, nay, ought to be religious: and what is religion, but to live an honest and sober life; to fear God, honour our rulers, say our prayers, and pay our debts? But I have just now thought of a way that will do. You have a great estate, pray get another member into your family—keep a chaplain; this done, you will find all will be well, and you will hear no more complaints from within or without; for you will be taken by all your servants, and others too, for a very godly man; neither believe nor regard what such babblers say, who talk of things that lie above all human reason, as Mr. Self-Love noted. Can three be one, or one be three? or, can a man be that God who made the world? or, can his righteousness be yours? or, can God give men a religion to guide them, and yet have mysteries in it? No, no, your own deeds must justify you: this Godliness is but foolishness; regard him not.

Riches, having thanked them for their good counsel, with a great deal of joy, retires himself, being very well satisfied with the advice that his neighbours, Doctor Self-Love and Sir Worldly-Wisdom had given him.*

Riches now got a chaplain, and instead of opening to True Godliness, he introduced Counterfeit Godliness, which was occasioned through his own Ignorance, and the foolish counsel he had received. Now, this man, as it appears, proved a sad fellow; for though he was a good scholar, being brought up in a university, yet his religion consisted merely in strict forms and outward show. There was indeed not one in all the family that hated True Godliness more than he; for he made songs of him, and scoffed, jeered, and derided him continually, calling him a mysterious and nonsensical fellow, talking of things above all human reason, and above all belief. He also stirred up all the neighbourhood to find fault and quarrel with those who were friends of True Godliness, while he affirmed that he himself was properly entitled to that name. Poor Conscience himself was in some measure deceived and appeased. He saw so much appearance of piety in the order of family worship, and going to meeting, and reading the prayer book, that he seemed to think his hopes of his master's reformation were now realized.

* How important is it that such as are awakened to see their sin and danger should not take counsel with flesh and blood. Alas! not a few are thus ruined forever. Let those who feel the remonstrances of Conscience, go to some man of God, or holy matron, and ask advice. This may be the master's last call; if it be refused, we may "suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy."

Godliness now perceived he was like to have but cool entertainment at this house; so having waited at Riches' gate till his patience was almost exhausted, he began to think of a removal, and to travel to some other place: but before he took his final farewell, he was resolved to speak his mind freely to him, thereby to leave him without excuse; and therefore addressed him after this manner, being at the door ready to depart:

Godli. Well, Riches, I see now very clearly you did but flatter me when you began to hearken to your poor steward, Conscience, relative to my reception into your house; for it is very plain, you are grown far worse than before, and have blinded his eyes, by entertaining another, who calls himself by my name. But before I depart, I will show you the great danger you are in, and the cause of it. The truth is, you have got such a company of loose, base and deceitful servants, that they will utterly undo you, and bring upon you the eternal ruin of your poor soul, which I designed, by my coming to you, to save, and make happy forever. There was never any who entertained those graceless enemies of God, but were ruined by them at last; nay, and not only eternally in the world to come, but many times outwardly in this world; therefore I advise and entreat you to get rid of them, and promise I will help you to far better servants in their stead. For, first of all, can you think it will be safe for you to keep Presumption in your house, since there is scarce a more deceitful and dangerous wretch in the world? How many thousands of poor souls has he destroyed by causing them to presume on the mercy of God, and the death of Christ, and yet live in sin, pride, and covetousness, and in a vile manner hating and contemning me? Doth not God say, "It is hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven;" and yet you are persuaded by him to think it is an easy thing. And doth not the Scripture say, "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of God?"

Matt. v. 20; and yet he tells you, that by doing a few good deeds, or by giving a little of your abundance to the poor, your state is safe, whereas many of the Pharisees, as to acts of charity, exceedingly outdid you: nay, doth not St. Paul say, "Though he gave all his goods to the poor, and his body to be burned, yet without charity (that is to say, true love to God and Godliness) he was nothing?" 1 Cor. xiii. 3; and yet you, though you slight and condemn Godliness, are taught to presume on God's mercy, who hath notwithstanding positively said concerning you, and such as you are, "He that made them, will not save them; and he that formed them, will shew them no favour," Isaiah xxvii. 11.

As touching what Self-love saith, it is abominable. Do you not find the Lord Jesus say, that "Unless a man deny himself, he cannot be my disciple?" Matt. xvi. 24. Now, this fellow is one of the rest there meant, even Self-love and Self-righteousness, as well as Sinful-self and Natural-self. Sir, you must get rid of them all, or perish forever.

And then as to Worldly-Wisdom, he is Satan's Attorney-general, that ever gives counsel to all that hearken to him against God and Christ, and all revealed religion. He deceives and ruins the souls of men: ridicules all supernatural discoveries of God, or revealed religion, and would indeed paganize this land again. Doth not Paul say, "The world by wisdom knew not God?" He would have you believe nothing to be a truth or principle of religion, that lies above your own reason; and therefore he says that there is nothing mysterious in Christianity; by which he gives the Scripture the lie, that says, "Without controversy, great is the mystery of Godliness," 1 Tim. iii. 16.

He will not suffer those that hearken to him to believe the Trinity of persons in the sacred Godhead, nor that Christ is the most high God, and yet very Man, in one person, because it lies above man's wisdom or understanding to comprehend it; nor that sinners can be justified by the active and passive obedience of Christ, though it is positively asserted to be thus by the Spirit of God in his word.

This Worldly-Wisdom and Sir Human-Reason taught the Greeks (in the apostles' time) to contemn the preaching of Christ crucified, and salvation by him, as a foolish notion or idle dream, and so they strive to persuade people to think now, and thus to trample the chief principles of the Christian faith under their feet.

Alas! it is evident that there are many earthly things, or things in nature, which no man can comprehend, nor give a reason for; and is it surprising then, that the mysteries of the gospel, or the deep things of God, are above human reason to conceive, so as fully to comprehend them?

Yet, though these mysteries are above human reason, it is not against reason to believe them. Is it not reasonable that men believe what the God of Truth affirms? These scorers would not have you "sell all you have, and give it to the poor;" yet you know the Lord Jesus Christ gave that counsel to a rich man; and if you do not part with all in your love and affection, and actually when God calls for it, you can be no true Christian, because you do not love God with all your heart, nor above your gold and silver, or earthly riches.

Moreover, if you will not choose to become a fool in the esteem of carnal men, you can never be truly wise. See 1 Cor. iii. 18, "If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool that he may be wise." Let worldly wise men account you a fool; if you are spiritually wise, wise unto salvation, it matters not how you are called and censured by such whom Satan has blinded. Doth not the apostle say, "That the world by wisdom knew not God?"

Your servant Unbelief, is a wicked, devouring monster, that hath sent millions to hell, by hindering them from believing what God hath said in his word. He will not suffer you to believe nor give credit to that word, "If any man loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him," 1 John i. 15; nor to that word, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," John iii. 3; and "he that believeth not shall be damned," Mark xvi. 16; and many like awakening sentences. And thus he teaches you to make God a liar; for he hath said, You shall, without true faith, perish in your sins: but Unbelief says, Ye shall be saved, though ye live in your sins.

As to what Ignorance says, That you may purchase or merit peace of conscience by giving more liberally to the poor; and that you may also make you friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; he would make you think, that God and Jesus Christ will in that way become your friends, and save your soul when you die.

Sir, if you gave all your goods to feed the poor, (which you are far from doing,) yet you would be miserable; nothing that you can do can change your state, or procure God's acceptance of your person; no, you must obtain union with Christ, and receive me, or perish in your sins forever.

If money could purchase peace of conscience, or giving liberally to the poor merit heaven, what rich man need to fear being damned? And then also it might be very easy "for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven," which the Lord Christ says is not an easy thing. Sir, while the world is in your heart, in your love and affection, "the love of the Father is not in you," though you give much to the poor. As the young man, who was very rich, wanted one thing, so do you; that is, true faith and an interest in Christ: "You must be born again, or you cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven;" and that you can never be, until you receive the Holy Spirit, and let in True Godliness. Whosoever receives me, receives the Spirit, and true and right principles; such as these, that "all your own righteousness is as filthy rags;" and that all works before grace, are dead works, and profit men nothing. Moreover, That Christ's righteousness, exclusive of all inherent righteousness, alone justifies a believing sinner.

As concerning Pride, whom you entertain, as a sweet and beloved friend, he hath been the ruin of many souls; nay, and not only men, but angels also; for it is thought he was the principal one who wrought their destruction, and from heaven cast them down to hell, and of angels of light, made them devils. But, sir, remember that word, "Pride goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." What became of the great king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar, for entertaining this fellow? Was it not Pride that brought him down, and turned him a grazing, to eat straw like oxen? Dan. iii. 4. Moreover, what became of Herod the Great, who was fond of this companion? Did he not bring God's heavy wrath upon him in such a fearful manner, that a blessed angel was sent to smite him with death immediately, and he was eaten of worms? Acts xii. 23. Have you not read, that "the day cometh which shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, and all that do wickedly, shall be as stubble?" Hos. iv. 1. This haughty Pride is one of those seven things, as Solomon shows, which God hates, Prov. vi. 16. If you will not, O Riches, be persuaded from all I have said, to turn him out of your house, even take what will follow.

Vain-Hope, I know, is one that hath kept up your spirits, and spoken peace to you all along; but he will leave you like a false-hearted, and treacherous friend, when you come into distress. You hope to be saved, (and so did many thousands that are now in outer darkness;) but alas! what ground have you to build your hope upon? "The hypocrite's hope shall perish; whose hope shall be cut off, and whose trust shall be as a spider's web," Job xviii. 13, 14. Ah! Sir, what will your hope avail you, though you have gained the world, when God taketh away your soul?" Job xxvii. 8.

And lastly, as to your chosen friend Covetousness, he is made up of idolatry; and what can be more detestable to the Lord? He is indeed the ringleader to almost all manner of wickedness; nay, there is scarcely a viler and more abominable wretch breathing on earth, therefore justly called, "the root of all evil," 1 Tim. vi. 10. He hath taught many to play the thief, others to commit treason, and others to murder innocents for their inheritance; he is guilty of bribery, usury, extortion and oppression: it was he that made poor Achan lose his life; he also contrived the death of Naboth and his sons; and, more than all, he tempted Judas to sell, and basely to betray my dear Lord and Master Jesus Christ, for thirty pieces of silver. Do not blame me, therefore, if I bear so hard against him. Moreover, I can seldom get one foot into any rich man's house through his means; it is he and his companions who keep me out; he hath, through his hard heartedness, almost famished all the poor, both in city and country; and hath also of late very near betrayed my whole interest that I have in the world, into the enemy's hands: he hath also grievously corrupted many who profess kindness to me, by encumbering their minds so with the affairs of this life, that they cannot find the way to the church. When they should be hearing God's word, he forces them to abide in their shops;

nor will he suffer many of them to take a little time to pray in their families, nor in their closets. He has also exposed many of my poor ministers to many great straits and necessities, by which means their heads have been so filled with the cares of this life, that they have been incapacitated to preach the gospel as they ought to preach it; nor can they get such helps as are necessary, and all because of him. Nay, he hath almost undone every nation, by corrupting the law, and subverting justice, causing judges to judge for reward, and lawyers to plead more for fees than equity; and hath spoiled commerce, for he hath monopolized trades and commodities, so that many men have been undone by him. I cannot, Sir, reckon up all his horrible crimes; and is this he you so dearly love? And must I be slighted and disregarded by you through the love you bear to him? Alas! Sir, he will bring your soul, if you follow him, to destruction. Pray, what became of Ananias and Sapphira, whom he forced to tell a lie to the Holy Ghost? Acts v. 1—4. Who was it that caused the young man in the gospel to fall short of heaven, and to go away from Jesus Christ very sorrowful, and Demas to turn apostate, and embrace this evil world? Was it not Covetousness? Ah! Sir, take heed of this miscreant; for though some wicked ones of the earth may bless you, yet he will cause God to hate you. See what David saith, "The wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the Lord abhor-eth." Psl. x. 3. Consider these things, and be persuaded to put away all these deceitful companions, which you have a long time nourished in your house. Oh! that you would now at last, before I leave you, hearken to my counsel, and receive me into your house, and renounce that monster you have lately embraced, who calls himself by my name! What do you say, Riches?

Riches. Do you think I shall give entertainment to you, and lose all my great honour and credit amongst men?

Godli. Is not that honour that comes from God better than all the vain honour poor mortals can give you? You have, I am sure, a rare example to follow in this case: remember Moses; he was not of your mind. Some rich and noble men have, for my sake, denied themselves all the glory of this world, and accounted the reproaches of Christ greater riches than earthly honours and the pleasures of sin, which are but for a season.

Riches. If others were such fools to disgrace themselves, what is that to me?

Godli. Sir, I perceive your condition is miserable, for you seem to be hardened; and whilst you have had gracious means afforded you, to bring you to repentance, you are grown worse and worse: however, let me tell you, if you die before you have embraced and received me into your house, you will perish in your sins, and hell will be your portion forever. Those who reject me, reject God and Jesus Christ also; and to tell you the truth, all this time I have been at your door, the Lord Jesus hath stood waiting likewise.

Riches. Leave your canting. Do you begin to threaten me? am I not my own master? would you lord it over me? I perceive what you aim at; you would have me entertain you, that so your poor despised offspring may take advantage of me. I could find in my heart to be revenged on you, and set all the rabble of the town upon you. Sirrah! I have considered the business, and have had advice what to do from two able counsellors, Dr. Self-Love and Sir Worldly-Wisdom.

Godli. Sir, St. Paul did not take advice of those two depraved, degraded counsellors; that is, "he consulted not with flesh and blood."

Riches. Will you not leave your prating? You are called Godliness, but that is not your name: you are, I understand, a factious fellow, and your name is Stubbornness, alias Singularity; one may know what you are by the many names you go by. Know you, therefore, friend, that I have received the True Godliness already, and him will I keep. He is indeed an honourable person, one whom great men love, and is in favour with the princes of the earth: but as for you, I see no encouragement for any one to respect you; for as most people in all nations speak against you, and hate you, so you would, I know, soon spoil all my joys, and bring nothing but sorrow and fear along with you. I must not so much as make a false statement for my advantage, but you would threaten me with eternal ruin; nor go to a tavern, and by chance take a glass too much, and let now and then an oath slip, but you would stir up my steward, Conscience, to censure me unmercifully; but I shall teach him his place. Beside, if I should not give to the poor according to your humour, I should be censured and condemned by you as a wicked person; yea, and most of my habitual desires you would call hurtful lusts, and say they must be mortified, and that my greatest favourite must not be spared. I perceive what a fool you would make me; be gone from my door, or I will call one of my servants, who shall drive you out of the town.

His anger now rose excessively, and he began violently to thrust Godliness from the door, which no sooner did his chaplain, Mr. Reader, perceive, but he came to his assistance, with cruel rage, being stirred up by Envy, and accused Godliness in a most base and cruel manner, calling him all the vilest names he could devise, enough to make any ignorant and unthinking man conclude True Godliness was a hateful companion, and before all things to be avoided and discountenanced. His chaplain also warmly challenged him to dispute with him, and boisterously urged that text, "Be not righteous over much, neither make thyself over wise; why shouldest thou destroy thyself?" Eccl. vii. 16. He thought with this one weapon to have knocked True Godliness down, and have spoiled his travelling forever.

But he soon answered and said, that no man could be truly righteous over much, nor have too much of that pure wisdom that is from above; but that a man might, he told him, under pretence of righteousness, do more than God required of him, and so be righteous over much, (as the papists and others are,) and thereby destroy himself, since will-worship was of such an abominable nature; and that a man also might be over wise in his own conceit.

At this answer the dispute ended; and Riches perceiving his chaplain was worsted, disliked True Godliness much more, and raised all the rabble of the town upon him; among which were Pride, Ignorance, Wilful, Hate Good, Outside, Riot, Wasteful, Hard Heart, Giddy-Head, Pick-Thank, Rob-Saint, and other such ill-bred fellows. And moreover he affirmed, if he were not gone soon, he would send for the two constables, Oppression and Cruelty, to put him where he should be safe. Upon which, Godliness was forced to get away and hide himself, or else he had been cruelly beaten, or basely put to death: but he, being out of their reach, by the providence of God escaped without injury.

Godliness being thus forced to leave Riches' door, Vice and Ungodliness took the full possession of his house,* and Godliness went on his way, grieved to see how he had hitherto been slighted and abused.

* When conviction is once fairly suppressed, the evil passions reign more dreadfully than before. "The last state of that man is worse than the first." Ed.

CHAPTER IV.

Godliness, in his Travels, came to a Cottage, where dwelt one called Poverty, with whom he earnestly desired to make his Abode, but was denied Entertainment.

GODLINESS, finding how basely he had been served by Riches, and that he could not, with the strongest arguments and motives imaginable, get entertainment with him, travelled farther: and at last chanced to come to a small village, at the farthest end of which, (upon the common) he espied a little cottage; a poor old ruinous building, the windows of which being broken, they had crowded into the holes some old clothes, to keep out the cold; and, by its being propped up, it seemed as if it was ready to fall. But, however, he remembering what his blessed Lord and Master said, "the poor receive the gospel," resolved to go thither, for he "is no respecter of persons." He is as willing to be a guest to the poor as to the rich, and to dwell with the peasant as with the prince, or to make his abode in a cottage as in a palace. Being come up to the door, he understood the man's name who dwelt there was Poverty. Now Godliness knocked five or six times before he had any answer : but at last, being between sleeping and waking, Poverty asked, (though very faintly,) Who is there ? Who is at the door ?

Godli. A friend ; my name is True Godliness.

Pov. I have heard of your name, yet know you not : and moreover, I was forbid formerly to entertain one who goes by your name ; and it may be you as far as I know. I have heard that many thousands, through your means, have lost their lives as well as their estates. And though I have not much to lose, yet my life is as dear to me as any man's.

Godli. I will do thee no wrong, my friend ; but contrary-wise, if you open the door and kindly entertain me, you shall find me the best friend that ever you met with.

Pov. You speak well ; but what is it you will do for me ? Have you any money to impart, to procure food for my family, or clothing for my almost naked children ?

Godli. I cannot at present assure thee of worldly good things: I do not proffer men money, or hire them to open their doors to me: if I am not freely and heartily received, I will not come in at all. Friend, I do not trade in gold and silver; but this I will promise, if thou wilt kindly let me in, whatsoever good thing the Lord sees thou dost need, thou shalt, upon the word of Christ himself, have it. "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. vi. 33. You complain of want; come open to me: do you not remember that word, "They that fear the Lord shall not want any good thing?" Psl. xxxiv. 10. "The Lord will give grace and glory, and no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Psl. lxxxiv. 11. What dost thou say, Poverty?

Pov. I am in a very low condition: what you mean I cannot tell; but this I know, my head and heart are filled about other things. Alas! what can you think to meet with, or expect from me? Do you not see what a number of poor, hungry and ragged children I have? It is enough for me to get bread for them: I must leave the things which you talk of to my betters; I mean such who have more time to mind them, and are better learned. I cannot tell what to say to you.

Truly, we poor folks in the country think it is godliness enough for us to bear an honest mind, and pay truly for what we have, and go to church now and then, to hear some good prayers, and say the Creed, the Ten Commandments, and the Lord's Prayer, sometimes at home, when we come from work, if we do not chance to fall asleep first; but if I thought it would be for my profit, I would open to you.

Godli. Poverty, I will assure thee it will be infinitely for thy advantage; hast thou not read—

Pov. I cannot read, Sir.

Godli. But have you not heard then of that word, "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come," 1 Tim. iv. 8—and that word, "Godliness with contentment is great gain?" And now, because I see you are weak, I will tell you of some of those great blessings you will gain, if you receive me in truth. Wheresoever I come I bring reconciliation with God, pardon of sin, peace of conscience, and joy in the Holy Ghost ; I teach men to be diligent and frugal, and so help them to a decent competency ; nay, I raise men to honour too ; I will make thee a son of God, an heir of heaven, and at last set a crown of endless glory on thy head. What dost thou say, Poverty ?

Pov. I had rather have better clothes, and good provisions, and a better habitation ; these things suit my present necessity ; but as touching those things you talk of, I do not well understand what they are ; they may be but fancies. Besides, what work will you set me about ? I cannot endure hard labour.

Godli. But stay, Poverty, what kind of fellows are those you have in your house ?

Pov. What is that to you ; why do you not answer my questions ?

Godli. Why then I will tell you ; you must believe in Christ, and very fervently read the Holy Bible, and every Lord's-day, with great reverence and seriousness, hear God's blessed word, and pray at least twice a day ; nay, and I shall teach you to be more painful and laborious in your trade and worldly business ; but this, I know, cannot be done, unless you put away that horde of loose fellows in your house.

Now Poverty had, it seems, divers base and lazy companions, who were all grand enemies to True Godliness; their names were Unbelief, Ignorance, Idleness, Wasteful, and Fear-Man, together with some others. His own children, viz. Light-Fingers, Faint-Heart, and Carping-Care, were no better. Now, when he felt disposed to open to Godliness, these hindered him.

First, Sloth and Idleness would not let him rise* to call upon God, nor take pains to pull up the briars and thorns that grew in his heart; by which means his field lay barren and untilled, nothing growing therein, but what the ground brought forth naturally: nay, these made him of such a sluggish temper, and such a lover of rest, that he complained sometimes because he could not go without motion; nay, he was unwilling to be at the trouble of feeding himself; therefore would wish that men might live as trees and plants do. I remember a very wise man told me, "That he hides his hand in his bosom, and it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth," Prov. xxvi. 15, by the sad influence of these two lazy fellows, Sloth and Idleness.

Unbelief told him that those things of which Godliness talked were mere fictions; being unseen things, there was no reality in them: but when Poverty questioned the truth of what Unbelief spoke upon this account, and requested some explanations, then the wretch told him they were things far out of his reach, and that he had no part or lot in them; neither could they (if it were possible to obtain them) answer his present necessities.

Light-Fingers told him, he had been for a long while his best friend; and if it had not been for him, he had been starved long before now.

Distrust agreed to the discourse of his thieving brother, and positively said, if he turned Light-Fingers out of his house, (as he knew he must if Godliness came in,) he would certainly beg from door to door.

Wasteful told him, that True Godliness, if entertained, would not suffer him to buy such good provisions as he was used to do, on trust, unless he knew he was able to pay for them; and that he would not suffer him to go any more to merry meetings, and carouse amongst good fellows at the bar-room, nor recreate himself at cards, bowls, nine-pins, and other sports, for money, on holidays; and that he must be content with such things as he had, and never lose a day's work to gratify the lusts of the flesh, and that also he must change his company; which particularly was grievous for Poverty to hear.

Carping-Care filled his head so full of distracting thoughts, that he had not time to think of God, Christ, nor his own soul, from one week to another; but his great study was either to think where to borrow money, and so get more in debt, or else how to pay what he owed, to get out of debt, or how he should obtain employment. By this means he was filled with sad thoughts, not knowing how he should procure food or clothing for the future. Besides, it could not go out of his mind, but that at one time or other he should be arrested, and thrown into a gaol, having many times fearfully broken his word.

Faint-Heart and Fear-Man represented to him the danger he would be in upon many considerations, if True Godliness was entertained.

For, first, they told him how contemptible real godliness was grown, being of very little credit or esteem amongst men by reason of Vice, which was never more rampant and popular; insomuch that True Godliness was likely to be driven out of the world. Mr. Riches, who is lord of the manor, hath beat him away from his door, and hateth him with a perfect hatred; now, if you entertain him, he will soon hear of it, and so will become your deadly enemy, and will pull down your cottage, or warn you out, or be sure not to let you have a farthing of the poor's-money, nor ever set you to work any more; and what will become then of your poor wife and children? Nay, said they, we will tell you more; do you not hear what cruel edicts have been made against True Godliness? And how many of the Protestant churches have been pulled down and utterly demolished? And how he is persecuted almost every where? A more liberal and pleasing form of religion is now becoming popular, and will in a little time be generally embraced, and they who entertain True Godliness must expect to be reproached and reviled, nay, murdered. Besides, do you not hear that many who have for a long time entertained him, have lately turned him out of doors? they are weary of him, or afraid to own him; and is this a time for you to think of embracing him? Poverty (said they) pity yourself, and have more wit; you are poor enough already, and this is the way to make yourself more miserable. If Riches will not entertain him, who hath many advantages to relieve and help himself in distressing times, and sad exigencies, over what Poverty hath, or can promise himself, there is no ground of encouragement for you to open to him.*

Upon this poor Poverty resolved not to let True Godliness have a lodging in his house, but rather, instead thereof, to put stronger bolts and bars on his door. Godliness having waited to hear what these enemies of his would say, and perceiving they had now done, he broke silence, and began to speak after this manner.

Godli. Well, Poverty, I expected but little less from you, when I perceived you were resolved to hearken to those graceless companions and wicked children, for they would do their worst to keep me out; but I shall now, however, to undeceive you, answer them all.

As to those lazy companions, Sloth and Idleness, who would not wish you to labour for the good either of body or soul, they have in part brought you into this poor and miserable condition. Oh! how many have they brought to beg their bread from door to door! and stirred up others to rob, steal, and commit horrible murders, to uphold them in their loose, lazy, and ungodly lives; by which means they have brought, and daily do bring, a number of men and women to the gallows; but the greatest mischief they do, is to the souls of men; for they cast thousands into such a deep sleep, that they will never awake till they lift up their eyes in hell. They will not suffer them to labour to find out their danger, till it is too late; and others, when they do perceive their woful condition, are hindered by them from endeavouring timely, and in a right manner, to get out; they many times cry, "Lord, help us!" and "Lord, have mercy upon us!" but never strive to take hold of the offers of his grace and mercy, by cleaving to Christ, and leaving their abominable wickedness. It is the idle soul that suffers hunger, who shall beg at harvest, and have nothing; though there is bread enough and to spare in God's house, yet they will not suffer you to seek for it; but cause you to cry, "Yet a little sleep, yet a little slumber, yet a little folding of the hands to sleep," Prov. xxiv. 33. Is it not sad, notwithstanding your house is on fire, you cannot through Sloth and Idleness rise up? You are just ready to drop into ruin, and yet will not endeavour to deliver your own soul. O remember that word! "Take the slothful and unprofitable servant, and bind him hand and foot, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth," Matt. xxv. 30. And then,

As to Light-Fingers, he is a thief, and if you follow his dictates, he will bring you to the gibbet; besides, "No thief shall enter into the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. vi. 10.

Wasteful, his brother, is almost as bad as he. It was this vain fellow that brought the poor "Prodigal to eat husks with the swine," Luke xv. It is he who not only causes you to waste, and foolishly spend your money, but also your precious time, which should be improved for the good of your perishing soul.

Poverty, can it do you any harm to be taught to become a better husband, and not to consume the little you sometimes get, amongst riotous company, which might be a great comfort to your poor wife and children? Let me now appeal to my neighbour Morality, whether there is any ground for you to refuse to entertain me, because I teach you to be content with mean things, hard fare, and put you upon severe labour, and tell you not to run into debt, unless you know how to pay it.

Ignorance is a murderer, and hath destroyed millions of souls: though there was a time indeed when God seemed to wink at him, Acts. xvii. 30, that is, did not lay (as it were) his hands immediately upon him; he now is left altogether inexcusable, because God hath afforded you a sufficiency of light, to bring you to the true knowledge of salvation, the necessity of faith and true godliness, if you would escape the damnation of hell.

I found Unbelief the other day with Riches, and indeed I can come to no one's door, but I find him within. He affirms, that all my promises are fictions; being unseen things, they have no reality in them, or things to which you can never attain; and if you could, yet they could not answer your present necessities. If you would give credit to such a notorious liar, murderer, and blasphemer, who certainly, in a sly and treacherous manner, seeks to stab you at the heart, who can help it? Are Christ's promises of grace and peace here, and glory hereafter, because not seen with external eyes, fictions? He will tell you also, ere long, if you will believe him, that there is no God nor Devil, Heaven nor Hell, because not visibly seen with eyes; he may suggest the one to you, as well as the other. Come, Poverty, thousands of my children, by blessed experience, have found my promises no fictions nor idle fancies, but things full of reality, marrow and fatness: "O taste and see how good the Lord is!" And why may not you obtain these glorious good things, viz. union and communion with God, pardon of sin, peace of conscience, and joy in the Holy Ghost, as well as others? They were commonly given in the time of the gospel to the poor. Come, Poverty, these things are thine, (as sure as God is in heaven,) if thou wilt but let me in; poor Lazarus understood them, and experienced the sweetness of them, and shall through eternity. And then, lastly, have you no need of those good things of mine, because they may not so directly answer your outward necessity? Are not the necessities of your soul more to be minded than to get store of meat, drink, clothes, silver, and gold? What are all these things to the love and favour of God, an interest in Christ, and a right to the kingdom of heaven? How soon, alas! may your life be gone, and what good will these things do you then? Do you not see they perish in the using? And as they are corruptible, so likewise they can never satisfy nor fill the desires of your soul, nor do they suit the necessities thereof. Consider, can any of these things make thy soul happy? Can gold or silver enrich it? Or the rarest worldly dainties feed it? Or wine cheer it? No, Poverty: if thou hadst the things of this world in abundance, yet till thou lettest me in, and makest me thy chief companion, thy soul will be miserable. What is it to have plenty of all good things, and no God, no Christ, no pardon, no peace, but contrary-wise, the curse of God, horror of conscience, and ruin at last? Thou wilt, Poverty, become more happy if thou dost open thy door to me, and thou and I dwell together, than the proudest monarch of the earth: thy comforts, inward peace, and joy, will excel theirs, and thy riches be more abundant in quantity, besides the rare and excellent quality of them ; nay, and thy glory will be far more transcendent ; and besides, it will abide with thee to all eternity.

As touching Carping-Care, he hath almost broken thy heart already : he will not let thee sleep in the night ; but by telling thee of thy wants and necessities, sadly disturbs thy mind, but never gave thee a farthing ; and why shouldst thou hearken to him any longer ? He is thy utter enemy as well as mine. Turn him away, and Christ will care for you.

He has depressed thy very spirits, and weakened thy body, marred thy senses, especially the spiritual senses of thy soul ; so that thou canst not think one serious thought all the day ; nay, when Sloth and Idleness will let thee go to hear God's word, he follows thee thither too ; and so confounds thy mind with wandering thoughts, that devotion is spoiled, and you can profit nothing ; therefore, I beseech you, thrust him out.

Distrust, that faithless fellow, sets on this base Carping-Care, to perplex thy mind ; and this is not all ; for he tells thee, if thou turnest Light-Fingers out of doors, thou wilt certainly go a begging. Come, Poverty, they are a pack of sad villains, set on by their great master Apollyon, to bring thee to shame, as if there was no way to live, but by breaking God's commandment, "Thou shalt not steal." And is not he a wretch that shall call into question the care and faithfulness of God, whose promises are to feed and clothe thee, and to supply all thy necessities in the way of thy duty, so that thou shalt "want no good thing" (as I stated before,) though thou possibly mayst think that good for thee, which God knows is not? Isa. xl. 11. Psal. xxiv. 9, 10.

And now, in the last place, let me speak a few words to those cowardly fellows, Faint-Heart and Fear-Man. Isa. li. 12. They would have you fear man more than God; and yet I am ready to believe some of their words take as much place upon your heart as any thing you heard from the other.

They say I am grown here of late very contemptible, and am of very little esteem or credit amongst men, Isa. liii. 3, and that I shall ere long be constrained to fly into a corner to hide myself.

To this I answer, I never had much esteem amongst great men; nay, in every age of the world very few gave credit to me ; and now being come almost to the end of my travels into the last and worst age, I expect no other usage. How should I have many to admire and fell in love with me, when the Bible positively says, "All the world wondered after the beast," Rev. xiii. 3, that is, they were in love with, and admired Counterfeit Godliness? and the truth is, I marvel not at it, because the False Prophets have ever been more readily embraced than the True, and their words generally believed. "If another comes in his own name," (saith Jesus Christ) "him you will receive." The reason is easily discerned: Because they soothe the people in their sins, 1 Kings xxii. 13, 22. Alas! do not you see how Counterfeit Godliness gives liberty to men to please their sensual lusts, teaching an easier way to Heaven than I ever did or can? for I always taught, as at this day, the doctrine of Self-denial, Mark viii. 34, the necessity of faith in Christ, regeneration, and mortification of sin, &c. John iii. 5.

They say, I shall ere long be forced to fly into some corner ; if it should chance so to come to pass, wo be to you ; and indeed you had the more need with all speed to receive me into your house, lest if I retire you find me not, and so perish in your sins, John viii. 22.

Again, What though Riches hath rejected me, he never had much kindness for me, but was generally my enemy; and whereas they say, he will be displeased with you, and warn you out of your house, if you entertain me, what then? Christ will receive you into his house, and you had better possess him for a friend, than any prince upon the earth: "When my father and mother forsake me," saith David, "the Lord will take me up." Have you not read of that poor man whom the Pharisees excommunicated for cleaving to me, and how the Lord Jesus graciously received him? John ix. 35. Come, Poverty, do not fear the worst that men can do; God will help you, and he is above them all; and it will be but a little while before that word shall be made good, "Your brethren that hated you, and cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified; but he will appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed," Isa. lxvi. 5. Alas! man, the time is at hand when all will be undone, and be forced to cry out, Wo, wo, wo, that ever they were born! except those who have made me the joy and delight of their hearts. Say to the righteous, "it shall be well with him; wo to the wicked, it shall be ill with him," Isa. iii. 10. It is sad, indeed, to see any leave me in my adversity; but they were false friends, and let them go, John vi. 66; but do thou but kindly embrace me, and I will keep thee from falling; nay, thou shalt find me a sure refuge and defence to thee in the day of distress, Psl. ix. 9. Yea, and I will store thee with such good things as the rich have not. I am resolved to feast thy soul continually, and never leave thee nor forsake thee. Isa. xxv. 6. Come, thou and I shall live most happily together, notwithstanding thou art poor, if we can but get my dear friend Content to dwell with us, 1 Tim. vi. 6. What dost thou say, Poverty? Shall I find admittance?

Notwithstanding all that Godliness could say, Poverty would not give way to him, but began to give him reviling words, saying, he was born a gentleman, though he was fallen to decay; and that he would not suffer such tumults at his door; for it seems while Godliness was praying and pressing for entertainment, one Persecution, the offspring of Adam's eldest son Cain, Gen. iv. 8. had collected many wicked fellows together, to drive Godliness away from Poverty's door : so by the opposition within doors and without, Godliness found no lodging there ; yea, and finally escaped not without many bitter threatenings, and blasphemous words. Now, one reason why Riches and Poverty did not receive True Godliness, was, because Consideration dwelt with neither of them, who, being a grave counsellor, might possibly have given them better advice, than to deny entertainment to so estimable a friend. Godliness, after this, began to be at a stand which way to travel next ; but hearing of one Youth, who lived not far off, he resolved to see whether he might not get a dwelling with him, because he was one that his commission particularly directed him to visit.

CHAPTER V.

Godliness applies to Youth, who pleads various Excuses, and at last utterly declines receiving him at present.

NOT discouraged with the mal-treatment from which he had just escaped, Godliness hastens to Youth, whom he perceives enjoying himself in the shade of a beautiful grove, attended by his companions.

With difficulty could he obtain any notice; and when he did, Youth looked on him with some rudeness, and inquired, with visible resentment at the intrusion, who he was.

Godli. Your true friend and well wisher, Godliness. I have come to offer my company and services, and am ready not only to teach you how best to enjoy this present life, but the only method of escaping the awful evils of the world to come.

Youth. Dear Sir, I am not so ignorant of the sources of delight as to need your counsel; and as to the future dangers, of which you speak, I mean to guard against them. And beside, do you think me a wicked reprobate? I mean to injure no one in my gaiety. My moral character is without a spot, I assure you. Go to the old cruel misers, and to thieves, and such wicked persons, and reform them; as for me, I have no need of you at present.

Godli. Aye, Sir, but you need my Master's righteousness, Rev. iii. 17, 18. and also a part in his kingdom; and these are some of those glorious commodities I have to bestow upon you, if you will entertain me.

Youth. Aye, there it is; I perceive I must entertain you, if I would have them: but I tell you plainly, your company does not suit my age. Sir, you will spoil all my pleasures, if I receive you. You will cause me also to abandon these dear friends and companions who rejoice my heart by their delightful society.

Now, those he called friends were Pride, Wanton, Vain-Glory, Love-Lust, Ambition, Gay-Clothes, Gamester, Please-Friend, Time-Server, Scornful, Hate-Good, and Scoffer.

Godli. Young man, believe me, those pleasures and delights upon which your heart is so much set are very hateful to God, and also abase your noble soul, which is of a sublime extraction. Farthermore, hear what wise Solomon saith, "Rejoice, O young man, in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the sight of thine eyes. But know, that for all these things, God will bring thee into judgment." You will pay dear at last for all your sensual pleasures.

Youth. But for all you say, wise Solomon made trial of all the delights of the children of men before he condemned them; and so will I too, as far as I can.

Godli. It is true, Solomon did so; and doth he not, by the sad experience he had of them, tell you, "All was vanity and vexation of spirit?" Come, Son, you had better believe the poison in the cup is deadly, than taste of it.

Youth. Sir, pray speak no more; I have not yet sowed all my wild oats; let me alone. In due time I shall send for you.

Godli. Let me rather persuade you to remember that "he that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption." Gal. vi. 8. You had better sow to the spirit. And now I will inform you what kind of crop you will have at harvest by sowing to the flesh.

Youth. Why, Sir, what crop shall I reap?

Godli. You are likely, in the first place, to reap in this world a crop of disappointment and regret, as the fruit of your folly and irreligion. Secondly, you will reap a crop of infamy and reproach; for "sin is the shame of any people." Prov. xiv. 34. And it will be a wonder if you reap not a crop of want and beggary too in the end. Thirdly, you will reap a crop of horrible and unsupportable guilt, Prov. xviii. 14. by which means your conscience will so torment you, that you will not be able to endure it, unless you go on in this ungodly course so long, that it is seared with a hot iron, and then you will reap a crop of all manner of foul and detestable pollution; yea, such corruption, that will cause God to loath your soul. Fourthly, you will reap also a crop of all the fearful plagues and curses that are in the book of God pronounced against wicked and presumptuous sinners, Deut. xxix. 19, 20, 21. And lastly, at the great and terrible day of judgment, you will reap a full crop of God's eternal wrath and vengeance; a crop of endless torments in hell-fire, Matt. xxv. 41. Now, if you like to gather in such a harvest, go on and sow your wild oats plentifully.

Youth. Sir, I intend to sow other seed hereafter; I desire only a little liberty in these my youthful days: if you should call at my door when I am old, I shall be willing to entertain you; nay, Sir, I do promise you, I will then open my doors to you.

Godli. Alas! my young friend, present promises to open hereafter to God and True Godliness, seldom end in real performance: he who promised to go and work in his master's vineyard, went not, Matt. xxi. 30. Such who put me off with promises to become godly hereafter, it is evident, purpose to be wicked for the present. Besides, do you know you shall live to be old? Or, if you should, that God will send me then to knock at your door? Nay, and let me tell you, if I should then visit you, I fear it will be to no purpose, because, Sir, you ripen apace already in wickedness, and sin is of a hardening nature. Evil habits are not easily changed; the Ethiopian may as soon change his skin, or the leopard his spots, as you may learn to do well, Jer. xiii. 23. and open to me, when you have been a long time accustomed to do evil: therefore open to me now.

Youth. Sir, you will raise my temper presently, if you leave not off your canting. You are, I am sure, a gentleman for whom few or none care. Have any of the rulers and nobles of the nations embraced you? John vii. 48. Why do you not see if they will entertain you?

Godli. Nay, pray be not offended with me; I seek your profit; I will do you no wrong. You shall not lose any thing in the end by me, though possibly you may have to part with something for my sake; but if you do, I will repay you again an hundred-fold in this world, Matt. xix. 29; and in the world to come you shall have life everlasting. And what though not many mighty, and not many noble ones do love me, or will entertain me, 1 Cor. i. 26. it is not because I do not deserve esteem from them, but because they are incensed against me by the devil, and are so in love with Vice, my mortal enemy. Sir, I am abused, and rendered very odious by wicked men, as if I were factious, restless, and seditious. Acts xxiv. 25. And this is the reason why I am so slighted and contemned.

Youth. Aye, and to speak the truth, I cannot believe but you are the cause of all the present discord, animosities, and confusions that are amongst us ; for since you came into this country, what disputes, contentions, and distractions, have been here ?

Godli. I and my children ever, I must confess, were thus censured and falsely accused, though never so stigmatized as now of late, Isa. viii. 18. Jerusalem of old was called a rebellious and bad city, because I dwelt in it ; and my enemies said of old time, Sedition had been there, and that it was a great enemy to kings and governments, Ezra iv. 12, 15. But it is no marvel I am thus abused, considering my Lord and Master himself was loaded with like calumnies, John x. 20. being accused with sedition, and called an enemy to Cæsar likewise. But let not this discourage you from receiving me, for all these things are utterly contrary to my nature, and abhorred by me and all my good friends.

Youth. It will not be for my honour to give you a reception ; I shall be derided and scoffed at, should I do it, and be looked upon as a foolish person : therefore pray depart.

Godli. What if you lose the honour of this world ?—I will raise you to far greater : “ For honour and riches are with Christ ; yea, lasting riches and righteousness.” Prov. viii. 18.

John xii. 26. They that receive me, and serve Christ, God will honour.

Youth. Pray let me alone until another time, until I am a little older.

Godli. Sir, my Master commands you to "remember him now in the days of your youth," Eccles. xii. 1. and to remember him, is to embrace me: and let me tell you, to reject me, is rebellion against him who is the King of kings, and Lord of lords, John xii. 48. Shall not what he requires be done?

Youth. I have other business at present of greater concern than to attend on such a guest; take your answer, therefore, and be gone.

Godli. Do not mistake yourself. To receive me, and to lead a godly life, is business of the greatest concernment. Were you not made and sent hither on purpose to serve and honour your Creator, and not to live like an irrational being, and serve the enemy of all righteousness, as heretofore you have done? Isa. xliii. 21. Acts xvi. 27. If you do persist in these courses, be assured you will perish in hell at last.

Upon this the young gallant was in a great rage, and swore he would be revenged on him, and on all his friends, if he did not keep at a distance. And presently all his companions and attendants, mentioned before, stirred him up to fall upon Godliness immediately, and force him away. Pride swelled; Vain-Glory vaunted himself; and both bid him disdain the proposal Godliness had made. Time-Serv-er and Please-Friends bid him mind what was the custom of the times, and do as other youth did. Scornful looked with contempt upon True Godliness; Gamester, set him to play at cards; Love-Lust enticed him to the abodes of infamy; Scoffer and Scornful jeered and derided him: nay, and not only so, but made base songs of him; and Hate-Good commanded them all to fall upon him, and banish him out of the world. And had it not been for fear of some neighbours, though they were but moral people, he had doubtless been utterly trodden down under their feet. But happily he escaped this time also, and got away, leaving the poor deluded Youth to himself, resolved to gratify his own sensual and luxurious appetite.

CHAPTER VI.

Godliness at the Door of Old-Age ; the Reasons why he refused to entertain him.

GODLINESS, being rejected both by Riches, Poverty, and Youth, resolved to see whether he might not be entertained by a certain decrepit and feeble person, called Old-Age, concluding with himself, that it was very probable his dear friend, Consideration, whom he had a long time sought for, might lodge in his house ; for, said he, surely Wisdom, though he dwell not with Riches, Poverty, nor Youth, yet doubtless he doth with the aged, Job xxxii. 7. He therefore made directly up to his door, where he knocked and called a considerable time without any answer ; but at last Old-Age inquired who was at his door.

Godli. Your real friend, True Godliness, who would fain have a lodging with you.

Old-Age. Godliness! I have heard, I think, of you, but do not know you. Besides, I am not able to rise up from my chair to let you in. I have such a weak and crazy body, and am so full of pains and aches, that I have enough to do to sustain my own infirmities: pray come another time: do not now trouble me.

Godli. Alas! Father, you may not live another day; death may seize you before tomorrow morning, Prov. xxvii. 1. Why should you put me off? I came to you when you were young, and then you stated that you could not welcome me, because you had not sowed all your wild oats, and you were too young, and I was not a fit companion for Youth. Moreover, you then said, when you were old, you would let me in; and will you put me off now too?

But all the means Godliness could use were of no avail; Old-Age was settled so on his lees, and had had such rebellious servants and children, that they would not suffer him to show Godliness the least favour, Jer. xlvi. 11. The names of some of them were Weary-Limbs, Dim-Eyes, Peevish, Hard-Heart, Impenitency, Self-Conceit, Enmity, Unbelief, and Ignorance; with many more of the like sort. The first I named were his own natural offspring, and somewhat younger than the rest. Hard-Heart he had nourished and fed continually from his youth, for Godliness found him at his house when he gave him a visit in the prime of his days ; but now he was grown very stout, stubborn, and obdurate. This fellow made Old-Age not to regard at all the threats of God. And he was so void of pity, that he stirred Old-Age up to stifle poor Conscience, who kept his accounts, and at every turn to tread him under foot, if he had at any time so much light and power as to tell him of his debts, viz. what abundance of abominable sins he had committed against God ; and not only so, but not to regard or pity the sad estate of his own soul. Nor did he concern himself with the low condition of God's church, but would curse and swear, and tell many stories and lies, and now and then be drunk, notwithstanding he was even ready to drop into hell ! And all this comes to pass through the evil nature of this Hard-Heart, and his companions Enmity and Unbelief.

These three had also bred up another graceless inmate as bad as themselves, one Impenitency ; so that all that could be said to him by God- liness, and his servant, Theology, concerning the detestable nature of sin, and his miserable condition, yet he could not be brought to repent, nor to let one tear fall for his sins; so that that word of the blessed apostle was made good in him, "But after thy hard and impenitent heart, thou treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds." Rom. ii. 5, 6.

Ignorance was in Youth's house, and in Poverty's house, but not such a sottish Ignorance as seemed to be with Old-Age; for he affirmed that God did not trouble himself to take notice of what men did below, but was taken up about high matters in heaven; neither indeed could he believe that he saw through dark clouds. "Is not God," saith he, "in the height of heaven? and behold the height of the stars, how high they are! And how doth God know? Can he judge through the dark clouds? Thick clouds are a covering to him, that he seeth not; and he walketh in the circuit of heaven." Job xxii. 12, 13, 14.

Moreover, he and Unbelief told him that he had as good a heart as the best; and that to hear and read some good prayers, and to mean well, was godliness enough for him. Besides, they would not suffer him to believe that God ever cast any of his creatures, whom he had made, into a lake of fire and brimstone. Nay, he was almost persuaded by them to believe there was no hell at all. As it regarded heaven, they told him there might be some such state, and that though he might not have so elevated a place there as some men, yet he should get in among the crowd and find some corner, for heaven was a very spacious place.

Self-Conceit caused him to think so highly of himself, that notwithstanding all that Godliness could say to confute Ignorance and Unbelief, he did not regard it all; for he said, they were all fools who troubled themselves about sin and another world; and that he who had lived so many years, understood better, and knew what to do; and bid Godliness cease his importunity; for, said he, every tub must stand upon its own bottom; and sure I am, God will not cast away an old man. I was born a Christian, and made a child of God, a member of Christ, an heir of the kingdom of heaven by my baptism, and would you persuade me to think my condition is bad at last? No, Sir, I understand what religion is very well. Do not mistake yourself, for I do not see that I am much pressed by our parson to strict godliness; but to come now and then to hear prayers, and receive the sacrament, and this I am resolved to do. And though my condition is considered so bad by you, I am sure there are many in our parish, and good churchmen, as bad if not far worse than I.

Godliness by this time perceived Old-Age was so hardened in his sins, and trained up by Ignorance for so long a time, that it was next to an impossibility to think the evil habits he had got by being accustomed so long to those ways of Vice and Ungodliness, should ever be changed; and considering he was become so unteachable and self-conceited, was resolved to leave him, not thinking it was worth his time to wait longer at his door, nor give any reply to those base bred children and servants he kept in his house; for Peevish made him so snappish that there was no speaking to him; remembering that word of the prophet, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? Then may you, who are accustomed to do evil, learn to do well." Jer. xiii. 23. Yet he could not but take pity on him, considering his age ; therefore he gave him the following general reply, and departed.

Godli. Father Old-Age, it grieves me to find you thus blind, and hardened in your evil ways ; and the rather, because I see your enemy, death, now standing with his sword drawn here at your door, ready to enter in, and hell is at his heels. Alas ! death, who now shakes his sword over your head, will soon sheath it in your heart. What will you do when you come to stand before God in judgment ? There is but a little airy breathing between you and eternal burning : it is better to have your eyes open on earth, to bewail your sins, than to have your eyes open in hell to bewail your sufferings ; though you will not let me in now, who would make you happy, yet you will not be able very long to keep death out, who will make you eternally miserable, Psal. lxxxix. 84. It is sad you will not see your danger, till you cannot escape it. As I now stand at your door, saying, Open to me, but am not let in ; so you ere long will say, " Lord, Lord, open to me ;" but you will be kept out, for none but those who receive me into their hearts on earth, will be received by Christ hereafter into heaven. Those who contemn Godliness here, will be contemned for their Ungodliness hereafter. Your poor, deluded soul, who thinks its state so good without grace and regeneration, will find it bad ere long, under wrath and condemnation: "For except a man be born again, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 3. This is the day of God's long-suffering, but quickly will come the day of your long-suffering; for he whose mercy you have abused, while you live, will let out his vengeance against you to eternity when you die, Thess. i. 8, 9.

Much to the same purpose he spake to him, and with deep sorrow left him to perish in his sins!

CHAPTER VII.

True Godliness, after this, travelled towards the city Jerusalem, near to which was a small village called Religion, in which dwelt Mr. Legalist, at whose door he knocked. The cause why he did not entertain him.

GODLINESS, having hitherto barely escaped with his life, thought it now full time to leave those parts, where he had long travelled up and down, and suffered many hardships, (being generally slighted and contemned by all where he came) and to travel into some other country, amongst people (if he could find such) who were not so abominably wicked, or at least not such visible and open enemies to him as others were ; and he thought it might be best to bend his course towards Jerusalem ; but before he entered Salem, he perceived a village lying near the city, and the name of that town he understood was Religion ; he therefore turned aside thither, and being informed that Mr. Legalist lived at the town's end, near mount Sinai, he resolved to give him a visit, and immediately came to his door, where with great earnestness he knocked; and he, being within, spake to this purpose :

Legal. Who is at my door ?

Godli. Sir, a stranger to you, though your very good friend, and one who would gladly have a lodging in your house.

Legal. What is your name ?

Godli. Sir, my name is True Godliness.

Legal. I wonder much you should say True Godliness is a stranger to me, or I to him. He has long been a cherished member of my family. Do be gone, you must be an impostor.

Godli. Sir, it is a mistake; you have been greatly deceived.

Legal. What, do I not know True Godliness? This is strange! Do not he and I converse together every day?

Godli. Sir, it is indeed true that there are one or two persons who go sometimes by my name; and it is very probable you may be acquainted with one of them. Pray what are his manners? What instructions does he give you? For by these I shall know who your guest is.

Legal. Why, Sir, he teaches me to keep the commandments of God, to lead a righteous life, to do unto all men as I would they should do unto me.

Godli. O! Sir, that is my friend and honest neighbour Morality, one that I love very well, and I am sure it is your great ignorance to take him for me: he will not say his name is True Godliness; for though in some things we are a little alike, I teaching the same doctrine you mention, yet we differ exceedingly in many things. First, we agree in saying you must keep God's commands. Secondly, he says that you must be righteous; I say the like. And, thirdly, that you should do unto all men as you would have them do to you; I say the very same, it being my Master's own doctrine. But we differ prodigiously on other points. He teaches you to seek justification by doing; but I, by believing: he by keeping the law; I by God's free grace, through the merits of Christ.

Legal. What is that, friend, you say? Are we not required to keep the law of God?

Godli. Sir, you ought to keep it as far as you are able, though not as it is the law of works, but as it is the law of Christ. You must not look for righteousness and justification by your keeping the law in any sense, (it was on this very block the Jews of old stumbled, and were broken in pieces,) because you have sinned, and daily break the law; and the least transgression thereof exposeth you to the wrath and curse of God.

Legal. I know I cannot perfectly keep the law, but I will do, by the help of God, what I can. And wherein I, through weakness, transgress the law, God is merciful, and I trust he will forgive me.

Godli. Forgive you! Why, he hath said, "He will in no wise clear the guilty." Moreover, "What the law saith, it saith to them that are under the law, that all mouths may be stopped, and the whole world become guilty before God." Rom. iii. 19.

Legal. What do you say? Will not God forgive me, who am a penitent person? Oh! what a horrible doctrine is this! I believe he will not forgive the impenitent, and such guilty ones, that the Scriptures speak of.

Godli. Mistake not, Sir—all are guilty; all have broken the law or first covenant; all are under sin and wrath. It is not your repentance that will do; God will not forgive any man, let him be who he will, except he believes in Jesus Christ, and takes hold of the merits of his blood. "By the deeds of the law no flesh shall be justified." God will not pardon your sins, notwithstanding your repentance, as a simple act of his mercy, unless you fly to him through Christ, who hath satisfied his justice; for what you say renders Christ's glorious undertaking void and unnecessary; and so casts a great reflection upon the wisdom of God, in sending his Son into the world.

Legal. How do you make that appear?

Godli. Do you not say you will do what you can to keep the law; and wherein you transgress, God will through his mercy forgive you? Now, if God accepts of your obedience in keeping the law, and forgives all your deviations, as a simple act of his mercy, and that hereby you are justified and accepted by him; why then did he send Jesus Christ into the world, to die the cursed death of the cross? For if by this way righteousness and salvation are attainable, it is evident Christ is dead in vain; for could not God have done all this if Christ had never come? Thou art a wretched creature; look to Christ, or thou art undone.

Legal. Nay, Sir, do not mistake me neither; I do not think my righteousness justifies me any otherwise than through the merits of Christ.

Godli. Sir, you err exceedingly: it is not your personal righteousness, no, not through Christ's merits, that justifies, but the merits of Christ, received by faith alone. Alas! now you discover indeed what a great stranger you are to me: you are one of those just men, it seems, who never went astray, or righteous ones that Christ came not to call. Alas! I always declare and testify, that all men must perish without faith in Christ. Doth not the text positively say, "He that believeth not shall be damned?" Mark xvi. 16. "He that hath the Son, hath life; and he that hath not the Son, shall not see life, but the wrath of God abides upon him." John iii. 36. Sir, "there is no other name given under heaven, whereby men can be saved." Acts iv. 12. "Another foundation can no man lay, than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. iii. 11. Come, let me in, and I will expel those dark clouds, and teach you another kind of doctrine.

I will help you to be holy, and not to depend upon it; to be righteous, but not to trust in it; I will lead you to say, "In the Lord have I righteousness;" and that he is made of God "wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption." But I forewarn you, if I come in, you must turn out those helpless and unprofitable servants you have kept.

Legal. What servants would you have me turn out?

Godli. Mr. Mis-Belief, and Good-Opinion, and Self-Righteousness you must turn out. Beside, you must also remove your dwelling farther off from Mount Sinai; for look about you, be gone quickly, for I see dreadful flashes of lightning, the mountain seems to be all on fire: and hark! do you not hear it thunder, Legalist? God is angry with you, Sir; there is no seeing his face but through a Mediator.

Legal. What, must I turn my tried servants out of doors?

Godli. There is no help for it; you must cast out Blind-Zeal, Ignorance, and Legal-Heart, too, for these are dangerous persons; and in their room place True-Zeal, Right-Faith, Broken-Heart, and Good-Understanding. Nay, Sir, and let me tell you, if you do not quickly expel these out of your tabernacle, you will be undone, and perish in your sins; for notwithstanding your great hopes of heaven, they will soon thrust you down into hell; for "publicans and harlots go into heaven before you."

Upon this he began to be very angry, and gave True Godliness hard words, calling him Libertine and Antinomian, characters that Godliness greatly detests. Moreover, Legalist told him he was sure he whom he had already received into his house was True Godliness, and he but an impostor. Finally, in a great rage he bid him begone from his door.

Upon this, Godliness perceiving Legalist was so wedded to his own opinion, that there was no hope of getting entertainment in his house, left him, and travelled a little farther into the town, being told that several persons lived not far off, who were thought to be sound Christians.

CHAPTER VIII.

Godliness encounters a Man of strange Countenance, who it appears was an Antinomian.

As Godliness passed on from the house of this self-righteous professor, he was accosted by a haughty looking person who seemed greatly disposed to dispute upon religion.

The matter of good works was soon broached, and with no small self confidence he rattled over his threadbare story.

Godliness. I am afraid you are not sound. Pray, friend, what do you believe about justification?

Antinomian. I believe all the elect are personally and actually justified from eternity, and beloved by the Lord with a love of complacency, before they believe, even as they are after being called and sanctified.

Godli. You certainly are very corrupt in your judgment, and hold a doctrine Jesus Christ abhors. Besides, you talk as if you understand not common sense: can any be actually and personally justified before they actually and personally exist?

Anti. I believe the elect were all actually justified from eternity.

Godli. What, actually and personally justified, and yet actually and personally condemned, at one and the same time! This is strange. Adam, for his first sin, fell under wrath and condemnation, and being a public person, all partake of his corrupt nature; and thus are children of wrath, as well as by their own actual transgressions, and so abide until they are transplanted out of that dead root, and are implanted into Jesus Christ, and partake of a vital union with him, John iii. 18, 36. Can righteousness be imputed and sin charged upon a person at the same time? Or are unbelievers justified persons? To justify or acquit a sinner, implies he was before guilty and condemned; and thus it was with all believers, before they were united to Christ, as the word of God testifieth, and so doth the Holy Ghost also, by conviction, when it first works upon the hearts and consciences of sinners;

therefore your notion charges the Holy Ghost with being a liar.

Anti. I tell you, I like you not, nor do I regard what you say. I am for free grace; God sees no sin, nor ever did, in his elect, nor need they mourn for sin, nor indulge any doubt; nay, though they are ungodly, their state is good, say what you will.

Godli. You are such as expose me and my friends to reproach; your doctrine, alas! tends to looseness and ungodliness. I also hear that your preachers never pray for pardon of sin; and also tolerate ignorant people to rend themselves from the true churches of Christ, and will hardly allow any to be true ministers but themselves. Those of your communion I see are just like the church of Laodicea; that is, "increased in goods, and have need of nothing" in their own sight, not poor in spirit. This is manifest, because your haughty preachers are so full, that they need not confess their sins, nor ask pardon of God.

The case of this man was so hopeless that Godliness would not stand to dispute with him, and therefore passed on.

CHAPTER IX.

Godliness came to Mr. Formalist's door, who bid him very welcome; but he suspecting his integrity, and that he harboured divers grand enemies of his, particularly one Hypocrisy, hesitated to go in. How Hypocrisy came to be discovered. Formalist at last refused to entertain True Godliness.

Godliness being informed that there was another great professor living in this village of Religion, he thought it was convenient for him to see whether he might not get a lodging in his house, because he was a man whom all the neighbourhood said had a great love to True Godliness: nay, many verily thought he had for a long time taken up his lodging with him, and wondered when they heard him ask for his house, (for by that means they perceived he was a stranger to him,) but it was a considerable time before he could find where he dwelt; for it appeared he was called by another name, viz. Devotion. But at last, coming by one man's door, and by another, he heard a man at prayer, and he spake so loud, that all who walked along the street, might hear him: he then concluded, it was very probable he might dwell there; and to his door he came and knocked.

Formal. Who's there?

Godli. My name is True Godliness.

Formal. True Godliness! Pray, Sir, come in: there is none in all the world I love more dearly; the best room in all my house is at your service. Pray, where have you been, and what news do you hear? Are the Imperialists and Turks at peace, and all things adjusted? How go things in the world? How doth it fare with our poor protestant brethren in France? What news from Scotland? When will the times be better?

Many such questions he asked and professed abundance of respect to True Godliness, and (as you heard) bid him come in, but never offered to open the door. Godliness was grieved to find him so full of words; but more especially, because he took up his time, and troubled his mind so much after news; nay, and that too, when he should open to True

Godliness, and just upon ending his devotion ; yet nevertheless, Godliness very mildly answered him to this purpose :

Godli. Sir, As to your first question, I answer, I have wandered about from place to place, to seek entertainment, I mean, a fit and convenient lodging for a little time, for it will not be long ere I have done travelling ; but I am fallen into such an evil and perilous time, that scarcely any one will shew me the favour to take me in, and make me welcome. Riches, Poverty, Youth and Old Age, have all refused me, and shut their doors against me ; and since I came into these parts, and particularly to your town, where every one concluded I should be most kindly embraced, the very first man I came to, hath denied me entertainment ; and not only so, but called me hard names, and declared I was a vile impostor.

Formal. What man is that? pray inform me.

Godli. My friend, to answer your question, the man is called Legalist.

Formal. O! Sir, there is not a man in all this town more haughty, proud, and conceited than he ; he concludes, I warrant you, that he hath godliness enough already ; he makes, in truth, the whole of religion to consist in principles of morality. I have heard him say that if a man do but square his life as near as he can according to the law of the ten commandments, not being guilty of gross sins, nor wilfully break any precepts of the two tables, he shall be saved. He never considers all the while the necessity of faith and regeneration; and although he trusted thus to his own righteousness, he is a very worldly, proud, and passionate person; nay, and he himself confesseth, he is a sinner, and yet would be justified by the law; whereas you know the least sins, lusts of the heart, and evil thoughts, are a breach of it; and the smallest breach is death and eternal wrath, without a compensation made to offended justice; and none was able to do this but Jesus Christ; and none have the blessing of his undertaking, but such as believe.

Godli. You seem to have a good understanding, and can talk well; but how comes it about, you let me stand all this while at your door? Is this your kindness to me? What avails your knowledge and parts, except you entertain True Godliness?

Formal. Dear Sir, have I not opened to you already? you are in my affections, and I will farther open to you, pray come in, and do as you please in my house.

Godli. I fear you mistake ; you have opened to me in one respect, but not in another : you seem to like my form, but not my power ; my external rites, but not my internal life. I am indeed received into your head, but not into your heart. The truth is, I suspect you.

Formal. Suspect me, Sir! for what ?

Godli. That you have one or two implacable enemies of mine hid secretly in your house.

Formal. Who, I Sir! God forbid I should hide any enemies of True Godliness! Who are they? Pray tell me their names? They shall be instantly dismissed.

Godli. Old-Man, Carnal-Affections, and Hypocrisy.

Formal. As touching Old-Man, there is no christian can be quite rid of him ; God forbid I should show him any countenance ; and as to Carnal-Affections, in this you mistake, for my affections are spiritual. But why should you think I harbour Hypocrisy in my house? I will assure you, there is none in all the world I hate more than that base fellow, for

I know God hates him; and shall I show countenance to him? Lord, far be it from me.

Godli. Nay, Formalist, be not too confident; it is not your bare denial of it which is sufficient to acquit you of the suspicion I have of you upon this account. I will see if I cannot find him out; for you have a certain officer in your house, who I am sure can make a righteous decision, if he be not basely corrupted and blinded by your pretending so much love and zeal to seeming holiness. I know he will not flatter any man, but speak according to his light and knowledge impartially at all times. Sir, I will appeal to him.

Formal. What is his name?

Godli. His name is Conscience.

Upon this, Conscience was called, and inquired of after this manner:

Godli. Conscience, I require you in the fear of God, to answer me a question or two concerning your master: Doth he not secretly lodge and hide one in his house, called Hypocrisy? * For I very much suspect him herein to be guilty; what do you say?

* Hypocrisy is here intended to mean self deception as well as the deception of others. We know of no

Con. Sir, if you please to give me his character, or give me some certain signs of his behaviour and properties, whereby I may know him, I will faithfully discover all that I understand as touching this matter.

Godli. Conscience, I thank you; you speak like an honest man, and indeed I have always found you impartial according to your light. I will then give you such a description of this subtle and deceitful enemy of mine, that you cannot well mistake; and this I shall do by propounding a few questions to you.

First. Sir, was your master ever thoroughly wounded in the sense of sin, being convinced of its ugly and abominable nature; there is nothing more hateful to God than that; not only convinced of the evil which attends it, or is the fruit of it, but that cursed evil there is in it, being utterly contrary to the holy and pure nature of God, a breach of his law; and that which hath made a breach between God and man, defaced the image of God in him, and is the cause of all that abominable enmity that book where the evidences of grace are more clearly described than here. The following eight particulars should be read with the most prayerful earnestness.

is in his heart against God, and me his blessed offspring; and also makes a man in love with the ways of the devil; nay, to be like the devil, conformable to him, and to do his will.

Secondly. Is there no one sin that secretly he loves and lives in (the evil habit never being broken)? Have you not found him now and then telling a lie for his advantage, or telling tales or stories, adding to them, to please the company, or to excuse himself, when accused, that so he may gain credit? Is he not sometimes overtaken by drunkenness? Is he not proud, minding more the honour, praise, and applause of men, in what he doth in religion, than the praise of God? Is he not covetous? Does he give according to his ability to the poor? Does he not rob God to serve the world? I mean, neglect hearing God's word, and other indispensable duties, for worldly profit, and so prefer the world above the word? Does he never in trading offend you, by speaking better of his commodities than they deserve? Is not the world more in his love and affections than God and Jesus Christ? Does he always give just weight and measure, and not take unlawful profit? Does he not make gain of Godliness, and use religion as a cloak to cover his secret sin? Does he concern himself for the interest of the gospel, and, by his open-heartedness, shew upon that account, he loves Christ above son or daughter? Is he resolved to part with all, rather than to sin against God, and to offend you his Conscience? Does he see more evil in the least sin, than in the greatest suffering?

Thirdly. Does he desire as much to have his sins mortified as pardoned; to be made holy here, as well as happy hereafter? Is he as much in love with the work of holiness as with the wages of holiness? Does he love the word of God because of the purity of it? Is he willing to bear the cross as well as wear the crown; to be with Christ in his temptations here, as well as with Christ in his exaltations hereafter? To live to God on earth, as well as to live with God in heaven?

Fourthly. Is he the same in private as in public? Does he not rest satisfied upon the bare performance of duty, not minding whether he hath met with God or not? Does he pray in private as if men saw him; and in public, as knowing God sees him? Does not his satisfaction more lie in his asking of God, than in his receiving from God? Does he not seek more for suitable words in prayer, than for a suitable heart? Does he not study more for acute expressions to affect the hearts of others, than to meet with powerful impressions upon his own? Does he not lengthen his prayers before others, and hurry them over in private? Does he as much seek after what he needs from God, as that which he needs of the world?

Fifthly. Can he bear reproofs kindly for his faults, and take them patiently; nay, and esteem him his greatest friend, who deals most candidly with him? Is he ready to take shame to himself, and give glory to God? Can he be contented in the way of well doing, though he meet with little sensible comfort from God, or outward respect from saints?

Sixthly. Does he as much desire to have his heart filled with grace, as his head with knowledge? Does he take as much care to make the glory of God his end, as the command of God his ground, in what he does?

Seventhly. Is he not more severe in pressing the smaller concerns of religion, than in urging the greater? Does he not require those duties of others, which he himself is loth to practice? Is he not more curious to know other men's conditions than his own?

Eighthly. Has he received a whole Christ with a whole heart? 1. A whole Christ comprehends all his offices, and a whole heart comprehends all his faculties. Has he received Christ, not only as a priest to die for him, but also as a prince to rule over him? Does he obey all God's precepts, as well as believe all God's promises? 2. As to his faculties, his understanding may be somewhat enlightened, but his affections may be carnal, and his will averse to True Godliness; is his heart divided? Come, Conscience, I do now command you, in the presence of the great and dreadful God, who searches all hearts, to make a righteous decision; tell me plainly, is my enemy Hypocrisy here or not? By these hints you may easily know him.

Consc. Sir, I must confess Hypocrisy is here; now I have found him out; nay, Sir, and he hath hid himself in his house ever since he came to live in this town of Religion. His greatest care has been to keep his name from being reproached by men. Should I tell you of those lusts which he harbours in his heart, and what favour he shews to that old man (you mentioned before,) I should quite shame him. He prays, hears and reads, but I have often found him very weary of these duties ; nay, Sir, he would seldom pray at all, were it not to quiet me ; besides, he performs them with a sad, cold, dead, carnal, and lifeless spirit. He cares much for the small things of religion, but neglects the more weighty ; nay, there is one thing more I will state ; as he does not love strict Godliness himself, so his heart is ready to rise against such who outdo him. Sir, I plainly perceive, he is a mere dissembler, yet he would be thought as religious a man as any in the town. I find him much abroad, finding faults in others, or espying the mote that is in his brother's eye, but he never perceives the beam that is in his own ; nay, and he is ready to fall out with many good Christians, because they will not follow him in habit, mode, and gesture, &c. In a word, most of those black marks of Hypocrisy, at which you hinted, I find in him.

Godli. Say no more ; I see I was not mistaken. Now Formalist, how can you pretend kindness to me, and thus secretly entertain one of my worst enemies ? Sir, it is you who has brought so great a reproach upon this poor town Religion, and on all its inhabitants; nay, and it is through your means I am so vilified and condemned by Ignorance, for he is ready to conclude, that all my friends and true favourites are such as yourself, viz. mere loose and formal hypocrites. Oh! you are like to be undone and perish forever, unless you soon turn this enemy of mine out of doors; for I expect no other result but that you will in a little time fall into apostasy; but should you die first, yet assure yourself you will be lost; for hell is prepared for such as you are. You are in the worst condition of all men; for the wicked hate you, because you pretend so much love to Religion and Godliness; God also, because you have not real, only pretended love to them, being not sincere and upright in your profession.

Formalist at this began to be very angry, being greatly offended at True Godliness; for he could not endure to see his condition depicted in this manner, nor to hear of his present or future misery, being persuaded by Mr Vain-Hope, Unbelief, and Good Opinion, to think his condition might be safe enough. However, Vain-Hope told him, though at present his state might be doubtful, yet he should have many days on earth, and that he might repent, and set all things right before he died; whose word and promise he adventured to take, and so bade True Godliness adieu; and no man's state in all his travels did he indeed more lament than that of blinded, hopeless Formalist.*

* That many unsound professors exist in the church on earth is beyond doubt. See the parables of the Sower—of the Tares—of the Ten Virgins, &c. How dreadful is such a condition! How should we prove our works, and watch unto prayer.

CHAPTER X.

Godliness, travelling farther into the Town (called Religion,) saw many People who had been great professors, retiring from the Town as fast as they could. In the discourse he had with one of them, the nature and danger of Apostacy is described.

Godliness had no sooner left Formalist's door, and gone a little farther into the town of Religion, than he espied a great number of people hasting out as fast as possible; nay, he observed some of them ran, though others went slowly. At first he wondered what occasioned this commotion, because the town was a little before supposed to be as safe and honourable a place to dwell in, as any in all the country, and had as great and glorious privileges belonging to it; but upon inquiry he was told, there was a number of lions, evening wolves, and other evil beasts (which had for a long time been shut up in their dens) getting out; and, having a great while been kept without prey, they were afraid they should be torn in pieces.

True Godliness at this seemed so deep concerned, that he could not let them pass without speaking to them; and observing that one of them looked like a sober man, though he hung down his head, as if he had been ashamed, resolved to have a little discourse with him. To him he thus addressed himself.

Godli. Sir, What is the reason you leave this town, and haste away so fast? When you first took up your dwelling here, did you not intend to abide in it as long as you lived?

Apostate, (for that it seems was his name.) Truly, Sir, I did intend it; I had a great love for this poor town, but I must now remove out, and be gone.

Godli. Why must you? Is there a necessity laid upon you to quit this place, this honourable town of Religion?

Apost. Sir, I shall be destroyed else, for the walls of late are gone much to decay; I do not see that safety to reside here as formerly: besides, they say there are a great number of lions, wolves, and other beasts of prey, breaking out upon us, and I am afraid, if I should escape with my life, yet having a few sheep and lambs, they will devour them: truly, Sir, I do it to save what I have; yet I wish very well to the place.

Godli. I am heartily sorry, that you indulge such fears; let me persuade you to return, and rest in this town. Sir, do not fear those lions; for God hath said, "He will break the teeth of the lions, the old lion, and the lions' whelps." Job iv. 10. But what though they should destroy your substance, is not your soul worth more than all the world? Mat. xxvi. 26. Come, go back again with me, and I will dwell with you, and be a sure defence to you, so that you will not be hurt, let lions, wolves, and devils too, do what they can. My name is True Godliness. Sir, I have saved many thousands from ruin in as great danger as you can be.

Apost. Sir, there will be no safe living for me. I must quit the place, the town is besieged.

Godli. What though it is besieged, God is able to defend it, and will be a wall of fire about it. But, Sir, if you proceed, I fear there will be no end to your wanderings. You must go far indeed to find a place as safe as the city you are leaving.

Apost. Sir, do not mistake me; I do not intend to go far, and am fully determined to return again when the danger is over: at present I will go but a little way out of town.

Godli. Sir, you will show yourself to be a traitorous and hypocritical person, if you leave this town in its distress. If the danger be great which attends it, you had the more need to abide in it, to strengthen and encourage the poor inhabitants. Pray do not show so base and cowardly a spirit. What is this less than to betray the town to enemies? Is not the strength of any place the people? Besides, your flying encourages the adversaries; for by this means they may think to frighten all out, and then with much ease take the town, and utterly destroy it. Beside, you weaken the hands, and grieve the hearts, of all true Christians, whose chief treasure lies in the town, and cannot be removed; and it being also their spiritual native place, they resolve to abide in it to the last, let what will come. You say you intend to return again when the danger is over. What dangers you see above others, to move you to quit the town, I know not; but let me tell you, few who leave from fear of human loss or danger, return again.

You say you intend to go but a little way; alas! you cannot tell where you shall stop. When once you desert God's gracious protection; you may go on to atheism, or any thing. Come, go back; let me save you from a fatal fall.

Apost. Sir, I retain the same principles that I formerly held, and my love is the same to the town as it ever was.

Godli. Poor man! You own the principles of True Religion, and yet cleave to vanity and sin. The three worthies of old, by your doctrine, might have retained faith and right principles of the true God in their hearts, and yet have bowed down to the golden image, and so needed not to have exposed themselves to the fiery furnace. Nay, by this doctrine, who need suffer persecution? Besides, it renders all the martyrs of old, mere fools and madmen. What do you say? Will you return? My company, it may be hoped, will allure you.

Apost. No, Sir, I have formerly had your company, and do not find you a necessary companion: besides, the town is sadly divided; those who love you do not agree.

Godli. Nay, Sir, what though the town is divided? It is my great grief to see it; but you had the more need to abide in it, to do what you can to persuade the divided inhabitants to unite in affection. Come, humble yourself before God for this great sin, and let us dwell together now, and thou shalt abide secure, notwithstanding the divisions within, and the troubles without, and have sweet peace and inward joy. What dost thou say?

Apost. Sir, say no more. I am resolved to be gone.

Godli. Well, since I see I cannot persuade you to return, but that you are resolve to leave Religion, and not receive True Godliness, I will tell you what your present state is, and what your future portion is like to be.

Apos. Pray, Sir, do not detain me; I must pass on.

Godli. I cannot let you go till I show you plainly your condition and prospects. Let me solemnly warn you of several deeply interesting things.

First, It appears, as I hinted before, that you have apostatized from Christ.

Secondly, You are, it is to be feared, forsaken of God, and left to yourself.

Thirdly, Either God will set Conscience against you, to torment you, (as he did upon Francis Spira) or else wholly give you up to your own heart's lusts, to walk in your own counsel.

Fourthly, Your sin tends towards the sin against the Holy Ghost, that shall never be forgiven, neither in this world, nor in that which is to come; for you have been a person much enlightened, and now wilfully cast off God and religion. Pray read these scriptures, Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Heb. x. 26—28: "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law, died without mercy, under two or three witnesses."

Fifthly, Jesus Christ will be ashamed of you at the last day, when he comes in the glory of the Father, with all his Holy Angels, Mark viii. 38.

Sixthly, Those who set their hands to the plough, and look back, are not fit for the kingdom of heaven, Luke ix. 62: nor will God's soul take pleasure in them.

Seventhly, You are like to have the most miserable place in hell. "The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb." Rev. xiv. 10.

Eighthly, Remember the fearful end of such persons as you are, and what dreadful judgments God hath many times brought upon them. Besides, who will trust you? For you that are false to God, and to your own soul, will never be faithful to men. Come, that very way you think to save all, you may lose all. Besides, let me tell you, "Light is sown for the righteous, (though it is a dark time now) and joy for the upright in heart." Nay, this precious seed is sown, as I could show you, in this present dispensation; but I am in haste. What do you say to these things? Will you return?

Apost. I dare not, Sir, at present.

Godli. Well then, I see you love the world above Christ. I have but little more to say to you; but, Sir, what man in his right mind would, to avoid a few sparks, leap into the fire? or to save his hat, lose his head? Alas! whilst you seek to save your estates, you are likely eternally to lose your soul.

Apost. Well, Sir, trouble not yourself; farewell.

Godli. Adieu then, poor soul!*

* Reader, are you wandering away from God? Have you left your first love, and relinquished that good profession made before many witnesses? O consider the affecting but just view here taken of the condition of the Apostate. Turn to the texts quoted—pray over them, and may you be brought back weeping, and bitterly repenting of sin.

CHAPTER XI.

Godliness, coming to Thoughtful's house, found there his friend Consideration whom he had a long time sought for. The great opposition Consideration met with.

Godliness, being still not without hopes of finding Serious Consideration, in or near this place, knocked at a man's door who was come to dwell in the town Religion. It encouraged him to learn that while so many were leaving the place, this man sought it for a habitation. Now, this person formerly had been a very great enemy to True Godliness, having lived a loose and profuse life; and wasted his chief substance, though he had not really come to poverty, but seemed to be in middling circumstances. Godliness had not long knocked at his door, before he listened to him and spake within himself to this purpose: Who is this that is come to my door? Sure, said he,

this is a voice different from any I ever heard in my life ; and he doth not knock as others used to do. At last he cried out, Who is there ? Who is it that is at my door ?

Godli. Soul, Christ is at the door, and I, his noble and renowned offspring, True Godliness. Dost thou not remember that word, " Behold I stand at the door and knock ?" &c. Rev. iii. 20. Sir, now I will ask you the like question ; pray what is your name ? I hope I am come to the right door.

He answered, I might very well be called Prodigal ; for I have hitherto lived a very thoughtless and wicked life ; but some call me of late Thoughtful, because, blessed be God, I am newly come to myself, by thinking upon my latter end, and the evil of my former ways.

Godli. But why dost thou choose to take up thy dwelling in this village now, when so many are going out ?

Thought. Because I hear it is the best town in all the country to secure a man from danger in evil times, provided I can but get a place in one of its strong holds in the heart of the town ; for I have heard there is no safe dwelling at the town's end ; no, nor any where in the suburbs.* Besides, I was told lately, that the city where I have dwelt till now of late, will suddenly be destroyed. I do it indeed to save my own soul. I am, Sir, desirous to find out, if it may be, where true peace, happiness and eternal felicity is to be had; for I see they are not to be found in those paths I formerly walked; I mean, in the ways of Riches, Honour, and the Pleasures of this world.

Godli. I commend thee, honest Thoughtful; thou hast done wisely, and like a considerate man. Prithee, let me come in and dwell with thee, and thou wilt find this poor town the safest and most secure place in these dangerous times, in all the world. Sir, I have wandered about a long time, travelling from place to place, to seek for one to whom I bear much good will, but hitherto I have not found him; his name is Consideration.

Upon this Consideration,† who it seems was

* We must be hearty in religion; to get into the neighbourhood, the suburbs of piety as it were, will do us no good. Reformation is not regeneration. Ed.

† One of the first indications of grace in the heart, is that the sinner begins to consider his ways. The process of this consideration is here well described. Ed.

within, whispered Thoughtful in his ear, and said, This is he that can alone made thee happy, if he be readily, sincerely, and heartily embraced and entertained. Is it not good for thee to muse upon the worth and excellent nature of thy soul? Thou art made a man, and therefore for a nobler and higher end and employment, surely, than eating and drinking, sleeping and playing, trade and secular affairs, and to enjoy sensual pleasures. This glorious soul which lies in thy bosom, is capable of knowing God, and of enjoying union and communion with him forever; and all those who suffer the honours, profits, and pleasures of the world to take up and engross their hearts, go astray, and err from the great end of their creation. Alas! nothing can fill the desires of thy soul, but God himself; thou hast hitherto suffered thy affections and desires to run after whatsoever thou couldst think might yield thee felicity; but it is evident there is nothing thou canst find here below, that can satisfy thy thirsty and ever craving soul. Riches, which sometimes thy heart hath been so much set upon, cannot be thy chief happiness; for they are uncertain, fleeting, and variable: and let a man have ever so much of them, yet if they are his chief delight, he is still craving and desiring more; so that it is as Solomon says, "He that desireth silver, shall not be satisfied with silver."

Honours are of like nature; and besides their vanity, they depend on the minds, will, and humours of men, who are changeable and inconstant.

Pleasures and voluptuousness are common to beasts as well as men, and, what is worse, man has this additional disadvantage, that he endures remorse and discontent when the enjoyment is past.

Besides all this, Consideration, to induce him to open to True Godliness, bid him ask his soul in what state it now was, what it was doing, and whither it was going.

First, He endeavoured to show him, that his soul was in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity, being under the law and curse of God, both in respect of original and actual sin; he having not yet closed with Christ, nor received True Godliness.

Secondly, Then as to what he was doing, he bid him see if he did not neglect that one thing needful. Have you, said Consideration, made religion your chief business since you came to live in this place? Have you not rather spent too much of your time about notions and speculations?

Thirdly, Whither are you going? Are you fit to die? Are you going the way to heaven? Surely that cannot be, unless you receive True Godliness; for I have heard that he consists in a right faith, as well as in an holy life. Oh! what cost, labour, pains, means, motives and arguments hath God used to make men sensible of the everlasting interest of their souls, and to engage them to a serious preparation for another world!

And this serious preparation must necessarily be a thorough work of regeneration, faith, and spotless conversation; for the nature of the means must ever be suitable and agreeable to the nature of the end; and heaven being a holy place, nothing but perfect holiness reigneth there; so it were impossible to enter into it hereafter, without progress be made in holiness here. And how can it be thought that a man should reach the highest step of a ladder without ascending the lowermost first? Who (said he) ever hoped for a crop of corn without sowing any, or expected to reap wheat, and sowed nothing but tares?

Beside these, Consideration dwelt much on the nature and holiness of God, his infinite hatred of sin, and great severity against all unbelieving and impenitent souls, together with the perfect knowledge he had of the heart, thoughts, and ways of the children of men. He endeavoured to set in array the dreadful judgments, commands, threats, and precious promises of Jehovah.

He also brought to his mind the evil of sin, showing him what an abominable thing it was for a man to seek to please, obey, and do the will of the devil; and offend, disobey, and cross the will of God. Nay, he began to speak of the excellency of True Godliness also, and what he should gain by embracing him, and letting Christ, and the Spirit of Christ, Christ and the Grace of Christ, Christ and True Godliness, reign in his heart. Nay, he had so much to say, that Thoughtful was so persuaded, as to be on the point of opening the door to True Godliness; but on a sudden, there was a great disturbance in the house, several fellows made a violent uproar, and poor Consideration was quite put down, and came near being utterly driven out of the house.

Those who made all this disturbance were some old servants, who not having been often called to duty of late, had grown apprehensive of losing their places, and justly feared the actual admission of True Godliness would now drive them all away. Their names were Difficulty, Sloth, Deficiency, Security, Danger, Worldly Cares, and Carnal Company. These and other wicked servants therefore combined to obstruct this great and important business of opening to True Godliness.

First, Difficulty spake after this manner : Sir, do not trouble yourself to study to find out these great mysteries of Religion, for it is a work too difficult for you to understand ; there is nothing more mysterious ; therefore to muse upon them would be lost labour.

Sloth told him it was laborious and toilsome work, and it would be great weariness to him, if Difficulty did not make it utterly impossible.

Deficiency said he was a man of a weak understanding, and those things were matters for the learned and most knowing men to study ; nay, that many of them too, notwithstanding all their profound learning, proficiency, and skill in the languages, could hardly attain to the right knowledge of them.

Security endeavoured to make it appear that his condition was very good and safe now, and that he had godliness enough, without troubling himself farther ; and that he exceeded in holiness many men that had lived long in the town. Moreover, he told him, that he had followed the counsel of Consideration too much already.

Danger also spake several things. 1. That to give place to him, would let in his enemy Melancholy, which might endanger his life. Do you not see, said he, how uncomfortable this Consideration has made many brave men, causing them, by thinking on their latter end, to hang down their heads like a bull-rush, fold their arms, and spend their days in tears and weeping? Hearken not to him, for he will certainly infuse sad thoughts into your mind, and give you as it were nothing but gall and vinegar to drink.

2. He said, moreover, Consideration had made many men go beside themselves ; and if he gave way to him about this affair, he would be distracted.

3. He insinuated also, that if he seriously mused upon this matter, or gave place to Consideration, so that Godliness were let in, the times were such he would be undone, and utterly ruined.

Worldly-Cares proved as great an enemy to Consideration as any of them; for he could not seriously muse nor think upon eternity, or the present condition his poor soul was in, he was so hurried in his mind about the affairs of this life: nay, no sooner at any season did he set himself to ruminate or ponder them in his mind, but Worldly-Cares would expel and drive such thoughts away.

Carnal Company and Old Companions greatly abused Consideration. They turned Religion and Godliness into a jest, and made the precepts of the gospel matter for raillery; and told him, that those men who seemed most serious, were the most seditious; and that their profession savoured of nothing but pride, singularity, and hypocrisy.

Now, after they had spoken all their pleasure, and had silenced, nay, had quite routed poor Consideration, his mind was filled and hurried about many things, which Godliness, though not yet let in, overheard, and presently took them all up seriously and answered them one by one.

Godli. Honest Thoughtful, I would not have thee discouraged by those enemies thou hast within, so as to slight Consideration, for he is thy very good friend, and as able a counsellor as most in this town. Moreover, very great inconveniences have always followed those who have ignorantly slighted and contemned him; nay, I must tell thee, most of all those great miseries and heavy judgments that have befallen nations, cities, towns, churches, and particular souls, have been occasioned through their great neglect to hearken to Consideration. This was the cause of Israel's ruin of old. God, by his merciful providence, sent to them by his prophets, to warn them of their perilous estate and condition by reason of their sins; and not only told them of their imminent danger, but also revealed its true causes, and how they might easily provide remedies for the prevention of it; but they refused to lay it to heart, or give way to Consideration about it, which made Jehovah bewail their future misery after this manner: "O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end." Deut. xxxii. 29. Among other causes of their dismal calamities, none is more general, or oftener alleged, than the lack of Consideration. It is through this means, as by a common snare and deceit of the adversary, that most men fall into sin and reject me, and are holden also perpetually in Satan's bonds, to their destruction and perdition. Men seem determined to go on in their abominable lusts, pride, oppression, excess of riot, drunkenness, and all manner of debauchery, without considering what the end of these things will be. "Wo unto them," saith the Lord, "that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink, and continue until night, till wine inflame them; and the harp and viol, the tabret and pipe, and wine are in their feasts, but they regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operations of his hands." Isa. v. 11. Their lusts and sensuality brought them to neglect Consideration. "For this cause is my people led away captive, &c. for they have no knowledge, no understanding of the time to come, no consideration of their danger." He that will not lend an ear to Consideration, renders himself little better than a brute: and what follows this folly and madness? "Therefore (saith the Holy Ghost,) hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure, and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth, shall descend into it."

Isa. v. 13, 14. "A brutish man knoweth not, neither doth a fool understand this, when the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish: it is that they should be destroyed forever." Psal. xcii. 6, 7.

"The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." Isa. i. 3.

Negligence, Carelessness, Ignorance, and absence of Consideration, as they brought Jerusalem down wonderfully, Lam. i. 9, so they have been the bane and ruin of wretched men in all ages, and will be yours, if you hearken to these evil enemies of your soul, and suffer Consideration to be expelled. Why at this day are there so many people who drink up iniquity as the ox drinks water; that commit all manner of sin, outrage, and injustice, treading down the poor, and contemning me, without remorse of conscience, or dread of God's wrath and fearful vengeance; but for the lack of considering that which is like to be their reward and punishment? Thus saith the Lord, "Consider your ways, consider your doings." Haggai i. "Consider this, ye that forget God, lest he tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you." Psal. I. Aye, but they will not consider it, nor lay it to heart; they will not know in this their day, the things that belong to their peace, but inconsiderately put the evil day far away, and harden their hearts against God, provoking him to draw his sword, and cause his hand to take hold of judgment. Nothing doubtless can be more intolerable in the presence of the Almighty, than this iniquity, since he hath published his law, declared his pleasure concerning godliness, charging all to bear it in their minds, to ponder it in their hearts, to study and meditate upon it both day and night, at home and abroad, when they rise up, and when they lie down, and to make it their thoughts continually. And oh! that men should ever, notwithstanding all this, contemn it, and make it no part of their thoughts, but rather avoid with care the knowledge thereof! God makes his complaint, and denounceth judgment, but no man (as the prophet Jeremiah sheweth) will enter into consideration, nor mind why the land mourns: none cry out, "What have

I done!" All men, alas! are set upon their own courses, and run on with as great vehemence and fierce obstinacy, as the war horse rushes into battle, when he hears the trumpet sound a charge.

Come, Thoughtful, if thou adhere to Consideration, he will help thee to know God and thyself, and to find out the miserable condition thou and all men are in by nature. He is the key that openeth the door for me to enter the innermost room of thy heart; though it is true, he cannot open it without help. Nay, furthermore, he is the looking-glass, or rather the very eye of thy soul, whereby thou mayst view thyself, and see what a condition thy soul is in: hereby thou mayst espy thy debts, thy danger, thy duties, thy defects, thy safety, the course thou dost follow, the company thou dost keep; finally, the place and end to which thou drawest. He will give thee a view of all God's dealings with men since the creation of the world; the reason why God sent his Son, his gospel, his Spirit, his servants, and takes so much pains to bring men to salvation. By his help, thou mayst also find that all the means God uses to bring thee to a true sight and sense of sin and wrath, and to recover thee out of thy fallen estate, will prove vain and ineffectual to thee. Let, therefore, the consideration of the danger thou mayst escape through hearkening to him on the one hand, and the great advantage thou mayst receive on the other, together with the absolute necessity of cherishing him, if thou wouldst be happy, engage thee not to be discouraged to incline to him, nor regard what any speak against so good a servant as Consideration.

Give me admission, and I will bring thee acquainted with God and Jesus Christ; nay, help thee to a room in his heart, and lead thee into union and communion with him, and give thee much glorious light, and help thee to pardon for sin, peace of conscience, and joy in the Holy Ghost. I will make thee a son of God, give thee a place in the heavenly family, feed thee with the bread of life, clothe thee with glorious robes, which sparkle like diamonds, and make thee rich; rich in faith, in knowledge, in experience, truly rich, always rich, eternally rich, yea, set a crown of glory upon thy head, and make thee an heir of heaven and earth. Thy renown also will be great; thou shalt have angels to guard thee, Christ to serve thee, God to honour thee. Oh! love him who would lead thee into Christ's bosom, and cause thee to sit in heavenly places ; make thee to triumph with seraphims, and set down with thy glorified Redeemer upon the throne of God for evermore. Alas ! men deal with me and my friend Consideration, as the inhabitants of Sodom did with the three heavenly messengers that entered into Lot's house, viz. quarrel with us, abuse us, and offer violence to us—who seek to preserve them from being consumed, and who whilst we are with them, stay the hand of heaven from falling upon them, the hand of the destroying angel, that they perish not, and endeavour to make them forever happy, possessing all true felicity, and free them from all misery. Does not every man desire that which is good ? Was ever any man in love with torment ? Is it not every one's interest to study how to prevent it ? Why then surely Consideration cannot but have thy affection, unless thou dost contemn rivers of pleasures, inconceivable glory, even the inexhaustible riches of both worlds, and chooseth anguish, death, hell, and the lake that burneth with fire for thy portion.

As to the objections which Difficulty raises against thy compliance with my advice, they are soon answered.

First, He basely insinuates that to muse and ponder on the great concerns of Godliness and another world is a hard and difficult work. In great, and hazardous, and dangerous achievements for worldly advantages, however, this is not made an objection. Men do not care how difficult the work is, if it be but profitable : and shall this be a stumbling block in the way ? How should some houses be built, bridges over great rivers be made, fields be sowed, and dangerous voyages to sea be taken ? Shall the carpenter say, Oh it is difficult, and the husbandman say, It is difficult, and the mariner say, It is difficult, and so lay the enterprise aside ?

Is it not sad, and very surprising, that the enemies of the gospel, should not think any thing too hard and difficult to undertake to suppress and destroy Godliness ; and yet many who profess love to me, are not willing to encounter small difficulties to entertain and embrace me, though it be their only business and chief interest in the world ! Were a man's house on fire over his head, and he likely to be burned, would he not think of ways to escape though it was difficult ? It is not because consideration about heaven and happiness is so difficult, that men avoid them, but because they have no will nor love to these things; other things are more in their affections. Besides, the rarest things are not obtained but through great difficulty. What hazard do men often run for honour and worldly riches! Oh, what projects and contrivances do they find out! And wilt thou desist from this work, because it is difficult? Men do not think it hard to carry talents of lead, or mountains of sin on their backs, and yet think Consideration difficult, who, like a faithful friend, would tell them how to be rid of that load, that will sink them down into the lowest pit, except they obtain faith in Christ, or receive True Godliness into their hearts. They do not think it hard to dig into hell, yet they think Consideration hard, who would teach them a way to quench that fire. They do not think it hard to be oppressed by an usurper, and yet they think Consideration hard, who would help them to shake him off. O fools, and slow of heart! They that have courage to meet an army in the field, and have confidence to laugh at the glittering spear and shield; they that have courage to plough the sea, to face the mouth of a cannon, to stand a volley of shot, to fight duels, endure the noise of guns, hear the clashing of swords, and lie on the cold ground many nights together, to have an arm or leg cut off, think consideration about religious things too hard! Contemn the thoughts of being overcome by deceitful and timorous Difficulty.

As to what Deficiency says, that thou art a man of weak understanding; thou canst perceive that gold is better than glass, and that pearls are better than pebbles. Thou art able to perceive thou art mortal, and must die; and dost know, when a bone is broken, it is good to have it set; that food is good when thou art hungry; and that it is good to get clothes to cover thee. Art thou not, then, able to consider that there is need of food for thy soul, and clothes to cover the nakedness of thy soul, and that it is good to have grace to enrich thy soul? Art thou able to find out how grievous it is to be cast into a furnace of fire, and yet canst not understand that it is worse to be cast into a fire that cannot be quenched? Nay, have not very weak and simple persons attained to the skill of Consideration about their eternal state; and have even outdone the wise and learned of the world? “Knowledge is easy unto him that hath understanding." Prov. xiv. 16. "Wisdom gives subtlety to the simple, and young men knowledge and discretion." Prov. i. 4. "When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant to thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, and understanding shall keep thee." Prov. ii. 10, 11.

As for what Sloth saith, thou hast cause to abhor him, for he is a beggarly character, and deserves to be driven not only out of thy house, but out of the world, for he never did any man the least good : cast him out then as a vagabond. Thoughtful, wouldst thou not be at pains ? Remember, the slothful person shall beg at harvest, and have nothing. Thy house is ready to fall, and thy vineyard is grown over with thorns and nettles, and yet he would not have thee consider thy danger, until it is too late to escape it. Oh ! how many have lost their souls by this wretch ! What good comes of Idleness ? Besides, do you not see how the men of this world hate him ? They will not hearken to him, but will in despite of him engage in all ways and means to get bread to eat, and clothes to put on ; nay, seek out, through great industry, rare projects to amass riches; and wilt thou be drawn away by him, from thinking on the ready way to be made rich, great, and renowned for ever? It is the diligent hand that hath the promise: "Thou must seek for wisdom as for silver, and search for her as for hid treasure." Prov. ii. 4. Do not think that I put too great a burden upon thee; for observe, it is not necessary to take greater pains about this inestimable jewel, than men of the world take to get the perishing things of this life: nay, if men did but bestow half the labour about the good of their souls, that they do about getting the world, and providing for their bodies, what happy persons might they be!

As to what timorous, faint-hearted Danger has laid before thee, in respect to letting in Melancholy, this is a mere deceit; for there is a vast difference between serious Consideration and destructive Melancholy: a man is not sad, because he will not swear, cheat, gamble, and be drunk. Consideration will let thee see, that those men who are pleased so much with vain sports and merriment, have the least cause to rejoice of any men in the world.

Consideration will show you that whatsoever vain men may prate and boast of, touching joy and pleasures, yet there is no delight and felicity like that which is found in the ways of true virtue; that Godliness is the best security; that those serious persons who look dejected and melancholy to the carnal eye, have joys within which no stranger intermeddles with; and carry in their breast that which can make their life perpetually peaceful and joyous.

They are fools that count the life of a Christian madness, and his inward peace, an airy notion. Who is so frantic, as he who cherishes a serpent in his bosom, that will certainly sting him to death; who never sows, yet thinks to reap at harvest;* who might have glorious robes to clothe him, and yet values his own rags above them, or chooses to go unclothed;† who hates, and seeks to destroy his best friends, for the sake of whom he is not destroyed;‡ who thinks to go to heaven,

* “Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.” Gal. vi. 7.

† “All our righteousnesses are as filthy rags.” Isaiah lxiv. 6. “He hath covered me with the robe of righteousness.” Isaiah lxi. 10.

‡ “Because ye are not of the world, but I have and yet walks the direct way to hell? Can there be greater madness than to prefer a stone before bread, or feed upon husks with the swine, when there are all things to be had, by seeking for them? Can there be greater madness than to value a base lust above God, Christ, and eternal glory?

Whereas Danger, in order to obstruct Consideration from opening to me, tells thee of the evils of the times, and that, if I am let in, thou wilt be undone—be assured, if I am kept out, there is no way to escape, but ruined thou wilt be. No danger is like soul-danger: he can never be undone that hath God for his portion, and heaven for his inheritance. Lose thy soul, and what hast thou more? And unless thou consider soon, and open to me, thou canst not save it; for “without holiness no man shall see the Lord.”

Worldly-Cares, I know, hinders my dear friend Consideration as much as any one; he would persuade thee thou hast no time to chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.” John xv. 19.

These texts, selected from many of like import, at once prove and explain the expressions to which they refer. Ed.

think on God nor Godliness, having a trade to follow, a family to provide for, &c. But shall those things hinder thee from thinking of any thing else? Is there not one thing more needful, viz—to seriously think on me, and of the concerns of thy soul, when thou art at work, or about thy worldly affairs; when thou goest out, and when thou comest in; when thou liest down, and when thou risest up? Thy heart may be with God, when thy hands are fully employed. True, if the world is in thy heart, there can be but little room for Consideration, much less for True Godliness. A continual hurry of business puts out the eye whereby it should reflect upon itself. But shall the earth keep out heaven, and the prince of darkness shut out the Prince of Light, and briars and thorns choke the good seed? Shall Worldly-Cares and business be thy chief guests whom thou biddest welcome, and Christ stand at thy door as a neglected stranger? Shall Worldly Consideration be cherished, and Serious Consideration be crushed, who would put thee in a way to get to heaven? But remember this, he that hath not time to open to Christ here, Christ will find no time to open to him hereafter. Can the world help thee to peace and pardon on a death bed, or riches deliver thee in the day of wrath?

As to what thy Old Companions lay before thee, to render me odious, if thou persist in regarding them, adieu forever! They that hate Seriousness for themselves, must needs dislike it in others: these are Satan's agents, whom he sends abroad into the world to destroy virtue; these strive to put me into a wolf's skin, and then set the dogs of the town upon me. Shun keeping company with these scoffers and contemners of True Godliness, for the sake of thy precious soul. As thou art come into the town of Religion, so let the truly religious be thy companions, who will, instead of hindering, help Serious Consideration. What ground is there to think a man should mind the true interest of his soul, that keeps company with persons who make sport of Serious Consideration? What is he that keeps company with sinners, but an abettor of sinners? Remember that society in sin strangely diminishes the sense of its heinousness. As is a man's company, such is the man; and as is his company here, such it is likely to be hereafter. Oh, how do sinners harden one another.

er in ways of wickedness ! They think there is some comfort in having associates in misery. It is a hard thing indeed, Thoughtful, to be serious in such a wicked age as this. A wicked man, as he poisons the air in which he breathes, so he pollutes the age in which he lives. It is bad lodging in the house where God refuses to dwell ; with the froward thou wilt soon learn frowardness : but it is better to be contemned for virtue by men on earth, than to be condemned for vice by the God of heaven. What sayst thou, Thoughtful, shall Consideration prevail with thee to open the door to me ?

Conscience being now brought over to join with the solicitations of Godliness, Thoughtful was fully resolved to cherish Serious Consideration,* in spite of all the clamour, raised by the other inmates of his house. Indeed he determined to rid himself as soon as possible of every one of them, and had no doubt of immediate success—but lo! on a sudden, new enemies rose up in his house, and made strong opposition to the admission of Godliness. Of this we shall give an account in the next Chapter.

CHAPTER XII.

Thoughtful, though he had embraced Consideration, and was resolved to receive Godliness into his house, is hindered by Old-Man, Wilful-Will, Carnal-Affections, and Apollyon. He is aided by Laborious, but had not prevailed, had it not been for another who came in to his assistance.

Thoughtful, having with much joy and gladness embraced Consideration, and overcome the snares and impediments those adversaries (we mentioned before) laid in his way, was now resolved to receive True Godliness, and speedily close with Jesus Christ; but all on a sudden other enemies, that he had not suspected to be in his house before, rose up, and made strong opposition against his receiving this heavenly guest. These enemies were Old-Man, Carnal-Affections, and Wilful-Will, all stirred up by the envious prince Apollyon. But though he was thus discouraged by unexpected opposition, he found that he had, by the means of Consideration, and the light of God's word, some new friends to help and assist him ; their names were Conscience and Enlightened-Understanding. Now Apollyon being in great fear that Thoughtful, by the help of Consideration, Conscience and Enlightened Understanding, would embrace True Godliness, rose up in great fury, and spoke to the rest of the infernal host to this purpose :

Most mighty pow'rs, who once from heaven fell,
To raise this throne and monarchy in hell,
Bestir yourselves with speed, or all is gone,
For Thoughtful has almost the battle won.

All the powers of hell now combined to prevent Thoughtful from receiving True Godliness, and endeavoured to stir up Old-Man and Carnal-Affections, to do what they could to place his mind and thoughts on the perishing things of this life. This put poor Thoughtful to a stand. One while he was resolved to open the door, but then suddenly his heart was captivated with the pleasures and delights of this life. This was because his affections were not yet thoroughly changed, nor the evil qualities of his soul removed ; for Old-Man had grievously corrupted all his powers and faculties, which Godliness (who with patience waited still at his door) perceiving, asked him what the matter was that he did not let him in.

Thoughtful answered, he was hindered by a base adviser that he had in his house: upon this, Godliness and he fell into serious discourse again.

Godli. Who is it, Thoughtful, that hinders my being received?

Thought. His name is Old-Man.

Godli. Ah! he is my grand enemy, and hath been nearly six thousand years. There is not one in all the world, that has done more wrong than he and his daughter, Carnal-Affections.

Thought. I find also Wilful-Will is utterly against your admission: Lord, what will become of me? I know you are worthy of entertainment; and, oh! who am I, that you should come to be guest to such a vile and unworthy wretch!

Godli. Nay, Thoughtful, I do not stand alone, but here are others waiting at thy door to come in with me also, who are persons of no mean quality.

Thought. Others! pray who are they?

Godli. Why here is the eternal Jehovah, with Jesus Christ, the Prince of the kings of the earth, and the Holy Spirit, Rev. iii. 30.

Thought. Lord! what shall I do? O infinite and admirable grace and condescension! God and Jesus Christ, and the Holy Ghost, at my door, and I not let them in! Oh! this is amazing!

Godli. Moreover, I must tell thee; they have been waiting here ever since I came first to knock at thy door; and I so informed thee; but I perceive thy memory proves false. Thou art doubtless misled by that deceptive Old-Man; but if thou dost not open to me soon, I shall leave thee, and these illustrious guests will take their departure. Why dost thou not lay Old-Man prostrate? It is not enough to cry, What, Lord, shall I do? but thou must shake off Sloth, and like a brave and courageous soul acquit thyself.

Thought. Alas! what can I do? This Old-Man is too strong for me, and Wilful-Will is very stubborn too; I am unequal to them.

Godli. Why, I will tell thee; there is one in thy house that will help thee, if thou hearken to him.

Thought. What is his name, Sir?

Godli. His name is Conscience.

Thought, Sir, I know him well; he has, since his eyes were opened, been a very good friend to me: but for a great while he lay in my house as one dead, and I found his eyes almost put out by Old-Man; but all that he can do, is not sufficient without farther help.

Godli. Thou sayest right; thank Enlightened Understanding for that. Consideration, by bringing him to read and hear God's holy word, opened his eyes also. But is there no other friend of mine in thy house, who can lend thee assistance in this time of need?

Thought. Alas! Sir, whom have I else that can do any thing for me? for my house is full of adversaries; never was a cage fuller of unclean and hateful birds.

Godli. Thou sayest right; I believe thee, poor Thoughtful; but see if thou canst not find a friend that I dearly love, and have a long time sought for.

Thought. Pray, Sir, who is that? Tell me his name.

Godli. His name is Endeavour, alias Labourious. You cannot imagine, Thoughtful, what great things he hath done: O! I love him much; he helped Noah to build the ark, and Jacob to get the blessing, and to wrestle with the angel, and to prevail too ; and Solomon to build the temple. Consideration, it is true, caused David to think on his ways, but it was Endeavour that turned his foot to keep God's statutes. Consideration also brought the poor prodigal to his right mind, but it was Endeavour that sent him home to his father's house : it was he that made him find his feet, after the Spirit of God had brought him to himself : nay, I could tell thee, I have taught him to get many a blessing by prayer. Who was it that got the three loaves in the gospel ? Was it not the importunate Laborious ? Was it not he likewise that made the poor widow prevail with the unjust judge to avenge her of her adversary ? Nay, in a word, the promise of God is made to him—" If you follow on to know the Lord, then you shall know him." It is this diligent person that makes men, with God's blessing, rich ; I mean spiritually rich. Now, what dost thou say, Thoughtful ? Canst thou find my good friend Endeavour ?

Thought. Truly, Sir, now I think of it, I hope I have found him ; but he has been here but a little time, and has been too much neglected by me : for I did not " strive to enter in at the strait gate," till now. But I pray, wherein will he be so useful to me? What are his properties?

Godli. Why, he commonly stirs up men to open the door to me. He is a great enemy to Sloth and Idleness; he makes them rise betimes in the morning to call upon God, and to read his word, and search into it very diligently. He will make you incline your ear to what Conscience says, and make you tremble at his reproofs and accusations when you sin against God, if you will take his counsel. He will also cause you to go and hear sermons, and not to sleep when you get there, nor neglect nor slight convictions, nor be careless and negligent in any duty; and will help you to labour after faith, and not to rest upon any thing short of Christ.

Thought. O! Sir, this is the very friend I want; and blessed be God I have found him. I am resolved to make use of his help and assistance continually.

Upon this he became very diligent in attending upon all the means of grace. Moreover, by the help of Endeavour, he cut off some one or two of the members of Old-Man, that body of sin, and prayed morning and evening; shunned all open prophaneness and scandalous sins; would not speak at random with his tongue, nor neglect to hear one good sermon, when an opportunity presented, and became just in all his dealings with men. But now Apollyon, by the treachery of Old-Man, raised up another enemy which had almost undone him insensibly. This was Self-Righteousness, a very great enemy to True Godliness. By his influence Thoughtful was becoming quite contented with himself, and began to forget that he had not admitted True Godliness; but at last, he knocked again, and demanded instant admittance.

Godli. What is the cause of this great neglect? What, shall I not be received? O what a long time have I stood at your door! What is the difficulty now?

Thought. Truly, Sir, I had concluded that now the door was open, by the help of my good friend Laborious, for I have done what he required of me.

Godli. No, no, Thoughtful, I am still kept out. Wilful-Will and Old-Man have beguiled you, and let in another dangerous enemy, whose name is Self-Righteousness. I cannot enter till he be expelled and hated. This was he that quite undid poor Legalist, and will quite ruin you too, if you do not take heed. I would not have you slight Endeavour, but do not make an idol of him. If you be found in your own righteousness, you will be lost by your own unrighteousness; duties can never have too much of your diligence, nor too little of your dependence. Not the salt sea of thy own tears, but the red sea of Christ's blood must wash away thy sins. You must owe the life of your soul to the death of your Saviour. If you have no better righteousness than what is of your own providing, you will meet with no higher happiness than what is of your own deserving. You must take up duties in point of performance, but lay them all down again in point of dependence. There is as much cause to fear for you now as there ever was. What will you do?

Thought. Lord, help me! what shall I do indeed? O! how many are deceived, who think it is an easy thing to be saved! Surely I shall never attain to a state of grace and true conversion.

Upon this a melancholy and very dangerous person, (called Despond) attacked him, and almost prostrated him to the earth. Nay, I perceived, he fractured some of his bones, wounding him so grievously, that he despaired of life. Indeed, he was overwhelmed with trouble; and that which grieved him most of all, was, to think, that all this time, not only True Godliness, but Christ himself also waited at his door. Godliness, perceiving what a deplorable condition he was in, spake to him after this maner :

Godli. Poor Thoughtful, do not give way to Apollyon, that prince of darkness; for it is he who hath stirred up that cruel enemy Despond to take away thy life; that cruel destroyer hath sent many souls to hell. Come, though thy own righteousness is worth nothing, being but like filthy rags, yet Christ's righteousness is sufficient to cover thee, and his blood to heal thy wounds. Your business is to believe, viz. wholly to get out of yourself, and rely upon Christ's all-sufficient merits; and know assuredly, that the very moment you cast yourself, by a lively act of faith, upon Jesus Christ, I shall enter your habitation.

O know, poor Thoughtful, that Christ's righteousness hath more worth in it to save you, and raise you up to heaven, than your own unrighteousness hath weight to cast you down to hell. You say you are a great, and hell deserving sinner; but you can be but a sinner, and Christ died for sinners; and never did any throw themselves by an act of true faith upon him, but they were saved. He died for the chief of sinners.* Do you not hear him say, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest?" Matt. xi. 28, 29.

Thought. O that I could believe! My sins! my sins!

No sooner had Godliness showed him what it was to open the door, and laid before him the necessity of union with Christ, and of faith in him, but Apollyon, with the Old-Man, and other bitter enemies, began to cause dreadful commotions in his house; for nothing doth the devil fear more than true faith: and Thoughtful found it yet very hard to believe, Wilful Will being stubborn and perverse. Apollyon, also tried his skill in many other ways to undo him, so that he was hard beset; but when he saw none of those ways were likely to succeed, he laid before him the outward danger he would be in, if True Godliness were embraced; he told him, he was likely to suffer great persecution, it being the portion of all who entertained True Godliness, insomuch that his very life might be in danger. But Godliness comforted him with many precious promises; telling him also, he had such a glorious retinue to attend him, which he would bring into his house with him, that he need not fear any difficulty, provided he would but admit him; and seeing he was still unable to open the door, his enemies being too strong for him, he told him, there was one friend of his, whom, if he could prevail with to come to his assistance, he would soon make the way clear, and open the door. Who is that? said Thoughtful, with great earnestness mingled with joy. Godliness then discovered immediately the excellency of his person, and the nature of his operation, by which he soon understood it was the Holy Ghost. Upon this he was not a little delighted, and presently cried out, as one whose life is in danger, to God, to send the Holy Spirit to assist him. "O Lord, the Holy Spirit, teach me thy truth, and work in me to do thy pleasure." Thus he cried, with the greatest fervency, and presently there were strange strugglings indeed (the Holy Spirit acting upon all the faculties of his soul;) yea, such a conflict as he never before met with. Judgment in the combat behaved himself valiantly; Consideration was not wanting; Conscience laid on home blows, being backed by Endeavour; and in the beginning of the combat, the Holy Spirit came in, and with him Faith and other attendants of Godliness; then the door flew open, and Godliness entered. Old-Man hid himself. Wilful-Will submitted, and became Thoughtful's very good servant. Carnal Affections changed their minds, and were made heavenly; and so abode, increasingly, to his dying day.

True Godliness being now entered* into his house, with his attendants, Thoughtful

*It will be seen that the conversion described in this chapter, was not sudden and unaccountable—but that the mind became gradually prepared and enlightened. That sudden conversions do sometimes occur is indisputable, but they are rare—that is, such as are sudden in all their circumstances. In point of fact, regeneration was not a little comforted. Now the retinue of Godliness, who came in with him, were these, viz. Newman, True Love, Humility, Sobriety, Sincerity, Temperance, Self Clearing, Faithful, Excellent-Knowledge, Blessed-Experience, Godly-Zeal, Filial-Fear, Precious-Promises, Holy-Revenge, Vehement-Desire, Constant-Supplication, Spiritual-Indignation, Christian-Courage, Sincere Aims and Ends, Careful, Patience, Hospitality, Stability, Charity, Liberality, Chastity, Purity, Holy-Sympathy, Wake-Man, Watch-Well, Peaceable, Harmless, Gentleness, Brotherly-Kindness, and Love-All, besides several others of like quality. These, as I formerly stated, were all persons of noble birth, being the offspring of Heaven. I perceived also a most glorious company with them; and that you must be instantaneous. There never can be a moment in which a person is neither God's friend nor foe, neither possessing grace, nor destitute of it. Godliness enters the heart in an instant, though he may long knock and teach. The exact time is far less frequently known than is supposed, and is of little consequence to be ascertained. We may more safely judge whether godliness dwells in our heart, by examining whether his blessed retinue be there, than by endeavouring to assure ourselves how and when he entered. Ed.

may know what a happy man poor Thoughtful now became, I shall inform you who they were.

The first, was The Father of True Godliness, for he always dwells where he dwells, and abides with this his glorious and heavenly attendant. Then the Lord Jesus Christ; which brought that word to my remembrance, "If any man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." John xiv. 23. Also the other words, "I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with me," Rev. iii. 20. 2 Tim. i. 14. Also, The Holy Spirit, for he is said to dwell in us; and besides these, there was, Union. Reconciliation. Justification. Acceptation. Communion with the Father and Son. Adoption. Pardon of Sin. The Image of God. Peace of Conscience. Joy in the Holy Ghost. Free Access to the Throne of Grace. A Place in the heavenly Family. Fellowship with Saints. The earnest Sealing of the Spirit. Increase of Grace. The Attendance of an innumerable Company of Angels.

But lo! I looked, and afar off I espied another glorious train following, in the midst of which I plainly discerned, amongst others, (whose glory was so great I could not behold them,) Immortality, Incorruption, Perfection, Glorious Victory, Heavenly Triumph, the Beatifical Vision, Rivers of Pleasures, the Tree of Life, the King in his Beauty, a white Throne, Mansions of Glory, the Holy City, New Jerusalem, a Crown of Righteousness, and Millions of glorified saints coming amongst the holy Cherubim and Seraphim, and all the Host of Heaven, with palms and harps in their hands, singing Hallelujah to God and the Lamb. They made such melody, that it was sufficient to ravish the soul in such a manner, as to leave no heart nor spirit in us for the empty objects of this world.

Now the two first glorious companies who attended True Godliness here, entered with him immediately, and the other glories Thoughtful was sure of possessing after being faithful until death, so that he was wonderfully fortified against all domestic commotions, or foreign approaching dangers. He could not indeed, but expect new troubles would be raised against him, both from within and without; and so indeed it suddenly came to pass, for Apollyon, the prince of darkness, first raised up all his scattered forces which still remained within, and lurked in secure corners of his house. Old-Man, though he was dangerously wounded, and lay bleeding, and though Holy Revenge had a strict command to kill him, he did not presently do it, by which means it happened, that in a little time he seemed to revive again; which was a great grief to him, and a hinderance also to True Godliness. And the worst was, this inward corruption, alias, Old-Man, alias Body of Sin, getting too great power by the treachery of Apollyon, Prince of darkness, so laid before him his manifold evils, and remissness in holy duties, as to persuade him that he harboured an enemy of True Godliness, named Hypocrisy; and that he was likely, upon that account, to lose all his hopes here, and that happiness of which Godliness assured him hereafter. But, as the Lord had ordered it, Self-Clearing, by the help of Conscience, made it apparent to him, that Hypocrisy was not concealed in his house, nor in the least countenanced by him. For, first, they proved that he had a hatred of all iniquity, and did not allow of, nor countenance any sin whatsoever, by the aid of Spiritual-Indignation. And secondly, that there was no one duty which he was convinced of, but he readily submitted to it by the help of New-Obedience. Thirdly, That he was peculiarly careful of, and had alway (by the help of Christian Watch-well) kept a strict eye over Mrs. Heart, whom he most of all mistrusted, and had a great jealousy of. Fourthly, That he rested not upon the external performance of any duty, but did all to the praise and glory of God, by the help of True-Love. Fifthly, That he was the same continually in private which he was in public, by the assistance of Filial-Fear. Sixthly, And that also he gave, according to his ability, at all times, to Theology (Christ's minister) and to the poor saints; the one by the aid of New-Obedience, Bounty, Liberality, and Godly-Zeal, and the other by the help of Christian-Charity. Seventhly, That he did nothing to be seen of men, or for the sake of Vain-Glory, by the directions of Holy-Ends and Aims, and by the power of Heavenly New-Man. Eighthly, That he was always constant in his love to, and his esteem of True Godliness, being as much for the work of Godliness, as for the wages, by the assistance of Faithful. Ninthly, That he did not inordinately love, nor set his affections upon, the things of this life, by the help of Temperance and Sobriety. Tenthly, That he laboured to live a spotless life, being taught so to do by Purity. Eleventhly, That he bore up valiantly in the profession of the gospel, not being ashamed nor afraid to own Jesus Christ before men, by the means of Stability and Christian-Courage. Twelfthly, That he did not faint under afflictions and trials, by the help of Blessed-Experience, Patience, and Precious-Promises. Thirteenthly, And that he was kept from being corrupted in principle, or led into error, by the means of Excellent-Knowledge,*

Now Conscience and Self-Clearing having thus freed Thoughtful from the false charge about harbouring Hypocrisy, he perceived what excellent advantage he had, and should receive by Godliness' noble retinue; and hereupon he fell so in love with them, that he never would go any where, nor perform any service without their company; which Apollyon perceiving, knew it was in vain to assault him any more in that way; but being filled with rage and malice against him, he raised up mighty forces and powers upon him from without. He stirred up many of the base sort to abuse him, amongst which were these following; Hate-good, Time-Server, Pride, Out-Side, Riot, Ignorance, Hard-Heart, Scoffer, Please-All, Love-Lust, Giddy-Head, Rob-Saint, Temporizer, Idolator, Avarice, Shameless, High-Minded, Seared-Conscience; who, with many more of like sort, compassed him about like bees, mis-called and abused him in a cruel and unmerciful manner, which made him anxiously inquire what the cause should be; but at last he perceived the ground and reason of it was only because he had received True Godliness.

Remembering that word of Jesus Christ, "Marvel not if the world hate you;" and that word, "They shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my name sake;" with the saying of the apostle, "And all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution;" he saw that nothing could be expected but that these fellows would distress him. Though by the help he had from Godliness' glorious retinue, he was supported and established in the ways of grace and true holiness, yet he was somewhat disquieted in his mind. He now began to think he must remove from these tormentors. He wondered they should so perplex him, and felt sure, were he to change his condition and manner of living, he should certainly escape their annoyance and serve God with more pleasure and advantage. What was now essential to his peace was, to be associated with Christian Contentment.

CHAPTER XIII.

Thoughtful, meeting with his Friend Contentment, and finding now nothing wanting in order to the making of his Life sweet and comfortable, sung Hallelujahs, Hymns of Praise and Thanksgiving to God and the Lamb.

Thoughtful Christian, for so now we must call him, notwithstanding all the high and unutterable blessings, riches, and honour, he had acquired by embracing True Godliness, became sad and melancholy, by perceiving not only the great distresses and troubles which his family were like to meet with in this world, but also what unsettled, and unhappy days, he was fallen into, and of the abounding evils and horrid blasphemies which he witnessed wherever he came. Godliness, however, informed him of a person named Contentment, whom he saw he had not yet found; and remarked, that if he could but acquire him for an associate, his mind would remain sweetly settled and composed, and that he would enjoy all imaginable calmness of soul, and be delivered from all anxious thoughts, and undergo crosses and harsh accidents with equanimity and acquiescence of spirit; wholly submitting unto, and being fully satisfied with, the divine disposal. Now, this glorious, noble, and renowned personage, Contentment, had been, it seems, travelling from place to place, like a poor pilgrim, as True Godliness had done, seeking a fit resting place, but could find none. He had been to visit Riches, but was not admitted; and Poverty also, but found no lodging there; with Youth he could find no abode, and Old-Age was a stranger to him; Pleasure, could give him no entertainment; Honours were forced to say, we know him not. He was not lodged in the prince's palace, nor in the peasant's cottage: the unmarried sought him, but could not find him, and the married wished for him, but he found there was no abiding with them neither. Thoughtful now hearing that he was accustomed to dwell where Godliness took up his lodging, sent presently his old friend Consideration to seek for him, and by the providence of God, it was not long before he was found. For the information of my thinking reader, I shall show how Consideration, by the assistance of Faith, met with him, and brought him home to Thoughtful Christian, and made him his fixed companion.

First, Consideration led him forth to ponder upon the divine attributes, providences, and promises, and taught him to confide cheerfully in the infinite power, wisdom, holiness, mercy, goodness, truth, and faithfulness of God.

Secondly, He stirred him up to seek for Contentment, by observing his present state and condition. What, saith he, hath God done for thee! Thou wast in the gall of bitterness, and bond of iniquity, and God hath brought thee out, and yet not content! Thou wast a child of wrath, and now art a child of God, yet not content! Hast thou God for thy God, Christ for thy Saviour, the Holy Spirit for thy Comforter, and yet not content! Nay, doth God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit dwell with thee, and yet not content! Hast thou received True Godliness' glorious retinue into thy house, to abide with thee, to enrich thee, to strengthen thee, to comfort thee, and make thy life sweet to thee, and yet not content! Are thy sins pardoned, thy soul justified—hast thou union and communion with the Father and Son, and yet not content! Is thy name written in the Book of Life! Art thou an heir of a crown and a kingdom that fadeth not away, and yet not content! Nay, let me tell thee, all these things, and many more, are absolutely thine with Contentment. Come, art thou willing to possess them, to make them thine own, and enjoy them forever? If thou wouldst be sure of them, then get Contentment to dwell with thee; for "Godliness with contentment is great gain," 1 Tim. vi. 6. It doth not say, Godliness without Contentment, but with Contentment. This glorious prince will put thee into the present possession of all true happiness, and wilt thou not resolve to give him a residence in thy house?

Thirdly, Ponder upon the excellency of Contentment; for a saint never looks like himself, or acts like a person of rank and quality, who hath received so many glorious and excellent qualities and privileges, but when in all conditions he is therewith content.

Fourthly, Ponder, saith Consideration, upon the evils of Discontent. Oh! what dishonour doth it bring to God! what reproach to True Godliness! and what great wrong to thy own soul!

Fifthly, It is below thy Christian relation, to be discontent. It was the speech of Jonadab to Amon, "Why art thou, being a king's son, lean from day to day?" But that was for a wicked cause; he saw his spirit was troubled, for otherwise he was healthful enough. It is below thy relation to God, who is thy portion, thy shield, thy sanctuary, thy father. David thought it no small matter to be a son-in-law to an earthly king; and thou art the King's son of heaven and earth, and yet not content! It is below thy relation to Jesus Christ. What, art thou the spouse of Christ, a member of Christ, the brother and friend of Christ, an heir with Christ, and yet not content! It is below thy relation to the Holy Ghost. Is he thy comforter, guide, witness, strength, and art thou not content! It is below thy relation to the holy angels who are thy guard, thy attendants, thy friends, thy watch-men! hast thou millions of those glorious spirits to minister to thee, to fight for thee, keep thee in all thy ways, and yet not content! It is below thy relation to the saints and heavenly family. Art thou brought home to sit down with them, to partake of all the sacred privileges of God's house with them, and to have a share in all their prayers, and yet not content ! It is below the high and sovereign dignity thou art raised to. Art thou born from above, a prince, a favourite of heaven, an heir of both worlds, and yet not content !

Lastly, Consider, all thy afflictions, troubles, and sorrows are nothing, in comparison of what other saints have met with ; nay, to those Jesus Christ met with himself for thy sake, and art thou not content ! Besides, are they not less than thy sins deserve ? Nay, all those hard things thou meetest with, God intended to work for thy good. All the bitter things thou art ever like to meet with, may be in this world nothing but sweet hereafter, and yet not content ! All thy troubles will soon be gone, they are but for a moment ; besides, they are intermixed with much sweet, and yet not content !

No sooner had Consideration laid all these things and many other of the like nature before him, but lo ! to his joy, Contentment came in, and was immediately welcomed by Godliness' heavenly retinue ; yea, it cannot be imagined what rejoicing there was now in poor Thoughtful's house ; it would have diffused joy through every benevolent mind, to see how the scattered powers of the enemy were forced to fly into concealment. Apollyon himself was forced to withdraw; Despond was vanished; Disquiet and Murmur could find no place. Oh! this was to him the joyful day of days.

Now that blessed Contentment was fairly settled in the house, he with the kind retinue which Godliness had brought in before, soon began to set the affairs of Thoughtful in order. Constant Supplication proved himself an excellent help. Careful, Hospitality, Holy Sympathy, Love-All, and others contributed to secure the respect of all his neighbours. His residence in the town of Religion proved a public blessing; and so long as my knowledge of him continued, he remained happy and prosperous, ever blessing the day he became acquainted with TRUE GODLINESS, and employed much of his time in thanksgiving and praise to God and the Lamb.

CHRISTIAN POCKET LIBRARY.

LINCOLN & EDMANDS are publishing neat and cheap editions of a number of practical theological works, with elegant frontispieces, to be sold separately, and also in sets, entitled THE CHRISTIAN LIBRARY. The following are already published.

1. BAXTER'S CALL.

A new and beautiful stereotype edition of Baxter's Call, with Chalmers' Introductory Essay, and several Minor Works of Mr. Baxter, 18mo. with an elegant frontispiece—4 dolls. a dozen, in boards—6 dolls. bound, gilt.

☞ This invaluable work has rendered signal benefit to the cause of Christ, and been the happy means of awakening to multitudes; and it is now presented in a cheap and attracting form, and will no doubt excite the attention of charitable distributors of religious works. The testimonies to its inestimable worth are numerous. We select the following from a Sermon delivered before the Society for promoting Religious Knowledge, by DR. RIPPON, OF LONDON.

“Baxter's Call to the Unconverted has been a successful publication. The Call seems to have been the most useful of Mr. Baxter's works. It was drawn up at the earnest request of Archbishop USHER. Six brothers in one family were converted by it. Twenty thousand copies were printed in about a year, by the Author's consent. It was translated into French and Dutch, and learned foreigners in Poland, Hungary, and Helvetia, and in other parts, were very earnest to obtain it. In thirty-seven-years, it passed into twenty-six editions. Mr. ELLIOT, the apostle of the Indians, when he had translated the Bible into their language, translated also for them the Call to the Unconverted. Dr. WATTS said to Dr. GIBBONS, ‘I would rather be the author of Baxter's Call to the Unconverted, than the author of Milton's Paradise Lost.’

From the Sabbath School Treasury.

“This Call is too well known to need the approbation of a reviewer. We rejoice to see the book in its present neat, cheap dress. Its intrinsic worth and form will doubtless soon give it a place in most of the Sabbath school libraries in our land. This and the Saints’ Rest are worth hundreds of the moral and religious fictions of the present day.

The Publishers invite the attention of the Christian community to this neat and portable edition.

2. BAXTER’S SAINT’S REST.

Rev. Mr. MALCOM, of Boston says to the Publishers:—“I sincerely wish, that a work so excellent in itself, and which has received the seal of God’s blessing, not only in the instruction and comfort of saints, but in the conversion, by its instrumentality, of hundreds of souls, may now receive a very extended circulation.”

Rev. Dr. WAYLAND, President of Brown University, says:—“I am gratified to perceive that you have published a handsome edition of Baxter’s Saints’ Rest. Of the value of the work itself it is superfluous to speak. It has few equals in any language. The ordinary copies are most palpably beneath the value of the work.

3. THE IMITATION OF CHRIST,

By Thomas à Kempis, with Dr. Chalmer’s Introductory Essay. A new edition, edited by Rev. Howard Malcom.

☞ This work has for three hundred years been esteemed one of the best practical books in existence, and has gone through a vast number of editions, not only in the original Latin, but in every language of Europe. Because, however, the author intermingled many Roman Catholic peculiarities in the work, it has been recommended by Pastors to their flocks with some reservations. That the benefit of the work may be universally enjoyed, by all classes in the community, the translation of Payne, which best agrees with the original, has been revised by the Rev. Howard Malcom, and such retrenchments made; as adapt it to general use; and in its amended form it will undoubtedly receive a very extensive circulation. The late excellent Dr. Payson, says, in a letter to a young minister, "If you have not seen Thomas à Kempis, I beg you to procure it. For spirituality and weanedness from the world, I know of nothing equal to it."

4. MEMOIRS OF REV. SAM'L PEARCE.

☞ This beautiful specimen of Christian Biography has long been a favourite with the public, and has contributed much to excite and elevate the spirit of Christian philanthropy. The late excellent Dr. Payson, of Portland, remarked to a friend of the Publishers, that the Life of Samuel Pearce should be read by every minister of the gospel at least once a year; and that he knew of no work better adapted to excite ministerial zeal, and support a lofty and genuine devotion.

5. THE CHURCH MEMBER'S GUIDE,

By Rev. J. A. James, Birmingham, adapted to the American Churches by Rev. J. O. Choules.

☞ A universal expression of approbation has been given to this useful manual, as it brings home to the bosoms and feelings of Christians, of all ages and stations, the interesting duties which their several situations require; and a careful perusal of its pages can hardly fail to render every individual more active, more circumspect and more useful.

From the American Baptist Magazine, July, 1829.

"We are pleased with this work, and heartily recommend it to the churches. It contains the results of much observation and experience. Every one who reads it will wish others to read it. Let the spirit and the maxims of this book be prevalent, and the churches would indeed be happy communities.

"Mr. Choules deserves the thanks of the churches for his labour in preparing this American edition. We trust the work will be widely circulated. Its influence must be salutary."

Extract from the Christian Secretary.

“ We have just completed our perusal of the Church Member’s Guide.—The spontaneous effusion of our heart, on laying the book down, was—May every church member in our land soon possess this book, and be blest with all the happiness which conformity to its evangelical sentiments and directions, is calculated to confer. We unhesitatingly say, that church members of an evangelical mind will find much pleasure, instruction, and profit in reading this book, and rendering it in the matters of which it treats, as far as is consistent, what it purports to be, their “ Guide.”

6. TRAVELS OF TRUE GODLINESS.

By Benjamin Keach. Revised and improved. With a Memoir of his Life. By Howard Malcom, Pastor of Federal-St. Baptist Church, Boston.

☞ The lovers of allegorical writings will be highly gratified with the perusal of this interesting work. It presents a striking delineation of the obstacles which youth and old age, riches and poverty, formality and legalist, present to true religion, and the necessity of thoughtfulness and serious consideration, to the acquisition of truth, and the cordial reception of the gospel.

The above works are the commencement of a series, which the Publishers propose to prosecute, till they have comprised the greatest part of the popular practical religious publications of this class, and they are happy to witness that the public are disposed liberally to patronise them in the undertaking. Already three or four editions of some of the preceding works have been called for. Sabbath School and family libraries should all be supplied with a copy.
